The Electors Of The Holy Roman Empire

By HERBERT J. ERLANGER
New York City.

(Paper presented to the Detroit Convention of the A. N. A.)

The Holy Roman Empire was founded by Charlemagne in 800, and after the extinction of his house in 911 the Imperial Crown became definitely attached to the German section of the Empire, which simultaneously became an elective monarchy. But it took almost five hundred years before an imperial law regulated the procedure of the election and the question of who had a right to vote.

Through centuries of contested elections and civil wars it finally developed that seven princes of the Empire and no one else had the right to elect the German King and Roman Emperor. This development began in earnest after the fateful contested election of 1198 which brought on one of the longest and most devastating wars in the Empire, and the development was de facto accomplished when Rudolf of Hapsburg was elected in 1273. There were, however, still more minor quarrels which continued and which mainly centered around the rights of the King of Bohemia. Not until 1356, after another contested election in 1314 had resulted in another civil war between the house of Wittelsbach and Hapsburg, was it that Emperor Charles IV, of the House of Luxemburg, King of Bohemia, finally promulgated a law known as the Golden Bull at a diet at Nuremberg. This law confirmed the rights of the seven electors, including the King of Bohemia, and although at the time it was generally accepted, subsequently it found some opposition and was not used as the legal ground for the election of an Emperor until 1410, in which year Charles IV's youngest son, Sigismund, King of Bohemia, was elected Emperor. From that time on the Golden Bull was definitely regarded as the fundamental constitutional law of the Empire, and in the course of the early fifteenth century the Electors began to display their titles and emblems on their coins.

The Golden Bull provided for seven Electors, three spiritual and four temporal. The three spiritual Electors were the Archbishop of Cologne, at the time one Wilhelm of Gennep; the Archbishop of Mayence, at the time one Gerlach of Nassau; and the Archbishop of Trier or Treves, at the time one Boemund of Saarbrücken. The four temporal Electors were the King of Bohemia, at the time the Emperor; the Count Palatine of the Rhine, at the time Rupert II of Wittelsbach; the Margrave of Brandenburg, at the time Ludvig II of Wittelsbach; and the Duke of Saxony-Wittenberg, Rudolf of Ascania. Together with the electoral rights, each one of the electors received one of the Arch—or household—offices of the Empire. The three spiritual Electors were Archchancellors; Cologne for Italy, Mayence for Germany, and Trier for Lorraine, or, as it appears on the coin, for Gaul. The King of Bohemia was the Archcupbearer; the Count Palatine Arch-steward; the Margrave of Brandenburg the Archchamberlain, and the Duke of Saxony Archmarshal. The last three named also received an emblem which formed part of their coats-of-arms. The Elector Palatine received the orb, the Margrave the sceptre, and the Duke of Saxony the crossed swords.

Furthermore, the Golden Bull gave the Electors certain other rights beside that of electing the Emperor. From a numismatic point of view, the most important one was the right to strike gold coins, which previously had been an Imperial prerogative. But there were other rights, such as the exception of their subjects from Imperial jurisdiction by subjecting them exclusively to the jurisdiction of the Electors' own courts of justice. Furthermore, the Electors as a body had the right to meet and discuss and supervise the affairs of the Empire in general, and to impose limitations on the Emperors at the occasion of their election. The meetings of the Electors, called Kurfuerstentage, have not only played a very important part in the history of the Empire, but have also been the occasion of a great number of medals.

The provisions of the Golden Bull appointing the seven Electors remained unchanged until the early years of the Thirty Years War, that is, at least, as far as territories are concerned to which they are attached. The ruling houses, of course, changed some during that time. Brandenburg, for instance, came to the hands of the house of Hohenzollern in 1415 when Emperor Sigismund appointed the Burgrave Frederick of Nuremberg Margrave of Brandenburg after the death of the Emperor's cousin, Jobst of Moravia, the house of Luxemburg having bought the electorate of Brandenburg from the Wittelsbachs in 1373. Saxony, on the other hand, came into the hands of the house of Wettin in 1423, when Margrave Frederick of Meissen inherited it after the extinction of the Ascanian family. These changes were perfectly normal, but in 1547 John of Saxony made war on the Emperor, was defeated in the battle of Muhlberg, captured and divested of his electoral rights, which were transferred to his cousin Maurice of the younger or Albertine line of the house of Wettin, with which they remained forever after. Immediately after 1547 the title of Elector and Archmarshal, together with the crossed swords, appeared on Maurice's coinage, whereas John, who was released from captivity a few years later on, although retaining the crossed swords, replaced the title of "Elector" by the rather curious title "Born Elector." The sons of John omit any reference to the Elector and also the crossed swords from their coat-of-arms.

One of the last medals before the Thirty Years War, showing the shields of the seven Electors, is one struck on a meeting of the Electors in Nuremberg in 1611.

In 1618, after one hundred years of religious unrest, the Thirty Years War finally broke out, and this largely over a question involving two of the Electors. Emperor Mathias, King of Bohemia, was about to die in 1618, and the estates of Bohemia, largely Protestants, did not wish to see his successor on the Imperial throne and in the Hapsburg hereditary territories, Archduke Ferdinand of Styria, as their King, although he had already been crowned as such. For whereas Mathias, although a Catholic himself, had been very lenient with the Bohemian estates, Ferdinand was known as a fanatic Catholic and protagonist of the Catholic Counter-Reformation. The Bohemian estates consequently after having revolted in 1618, on Mathias' death in 1619, deposed Ferdinand, asserted the character of Bohemia as an elective monarchy, and finally elected as their King the Elector Palatine, Frederick V, the son-in-law of King James I of England.

The Emperor immediately undertook military action to regain Bohemia. Frederick's reign was short, and after little more than six months he was defeated by the Imperial army under the command of Maximilian I, the Duke of Bavaria, who had allied himself with the Emperor and was the leader of the Catholic interests amongst the princes of the Empire.

Maximilian was also the head of the younger branch of the house of Wittelsbach which had always pretended that the Golden Bull had provided for alternate possession of the electoral rights between the two branches of the house of Wittelsbach. Immediately after the defeat of Frederick, who was, of course, outlawed for having made war on the Emperor, he demanding and obtained from the Emperor that Frederick's electorate be transferred to him, which was finally done in 1623. Thereafter the title and emblem appear on the coinage of Maximilian and his successors, who call themselves Duke of Bavaria, Count Palatine, Electors of the Holy Roman Empire.

The coinage of the Palatine itself ceased to exist for the duration of the Thirty Years War, except for some coins with some neutral inscription issued by Maximilian.

In the general pacification which ended the Thirty Years War, generally known as the Peace of Westphalia, Charles Louis, the son of the erstwhile King of Bohemia, demanded the restitution of his electorate and was supported in his claims by France. On the other hand, Maximilian refused to give up what he had received, and even threatened the Emperor if he lost the electorate he would demand the money expended during the wars which he had conducted for the benefit of the Emperor. Emperor Ferdinand III himself was afraid that the Catholic majority in the Electoral Council might be endangered if Maximilian lost his electorate, and finally it was decided to create a new, eighth, electorate for Charles Louis, while Maximilian kept his. The Encyclopaedia Britannica and the Handbuch der Munzkunde say that at the same time a new household office, that of Archtreasurer, was created for the Elector Palatine, and in fact the coinage of Charles Louis always shows the title of Archtreasurer. Later Electors of Palatine vary between that title and the title of Archsteward, which is constantly being shown on the coins of the Electors of Bavaria. On the other hand, the coats-of-arms on Palatine coins after 1648 show in the middle shield merely a scroll and never the orb, the emblem of the Archsteward which appears on the coins of the Electors of Bavaria.

A large medal on the ratification of the Westphalian Peace at Nuremberg on June 16, 1650, which for the first time shows eight Electors instead of seven, does not show their symbols as Electors, but merely their family arms.

While it took almost three hundred years to add an eighth Elector to the original seven, it took little more than one-tenth of that time until a ninth was added. In 1692 Ernest Augustus, Duke of Brunswick-Luneburg, obtained from Emperor Leopold I his investiture as "Elector of Hanover," but it took until 1708 before the other Electors let him take his seat in the Electoral Council. In 1710, according to Grote's Genealogical Tables, he was created Archtreasurer and received the crown as his emblem. This, in fact, is reflected on the coinage of Hanover.

From 1692 to 1710 the Dukes of Brunswick-Luneburg, or, as they called themselves, Hanover, described themselves on their coins simply as "Electors of the Holy Empire" and their middle shield is entirely blank. After 1710 they take the title of Archtreasurer—notwithstanding that the Duke of Palatine already carried that title—and in the middle shield of their coat-of-arms they hereafter invariably show the Imperial crown. The Handbuch der Munzkunde says that the Elector of Hanover was made Archstandard-bearer, and became Archtreasurer only in 1778, after Bavaria and the Palatinate were united and the eighth electoral vote, together with the office of Archtreasurer, lapsed. This, however, is not reflected on the Hanoverian coinage. As said before, it shows the title of Archtreasurer and the Imperial crown continuously after 1710. On the other hand, the Duke of Wurttemberg was Standardbearer ever since 1495 and has shown the Imperial standard in his coat-of-arms before that time and continues to do so until the end of the Empire.

Reverse of medal on the meeting of the Seven Electors, Nurnberg, 1611.

But even before the Elector of Hanover had been admitted to the Electoral Council, another change, a temporal one this time, had occurred. In 1701 the War of the Spanish Succession between Louis XIV and Emperor Leopold had broken out, and in this war the Elector Maximilian II of Bavaria and his brother Elector Joseph Clement of Cologne had sided with France. This was technically a violation of the Treaty of Westphalia, which prohibited princes of the Empire from making war on the Emperor. Nobody had ever taken this clause very seriously, but after the Emperor's son, Joseph I, occupied Bavaria, he took advantage of the above mentioned clause and outlawed both brothers. As a consequence thereof they lost their electoral votes and did not participate in the election of Joseph's brother, Charles VI, in 1711. There is a medal of the election of 1711 showing only the shields of seven Electors instead of nine.

In the general pacification after the War of the Spanish Succession, best known as the Treaty of Utrecht, the Elector of Bavaria and the Elector of Cologne regained their electoral votes as well as their territories.

A new disturbance occurred in 1740. In this year the younger line, or German line, of the house of Hapsburg became extinct through the death of Charles VI, and according to his testament the Hapsburg lands fell to his daughter Maria Theresa, who was married to Duke Francis of Lorraine-Tuscany. The right of Maria Theresa to sit in the Electoral Council, however was contested by the other Electors on account of her female sex, and the assembly which elected Charles Albert, Elector of Bavaria, as Emperor Charles VII, took place without any representation of the Bohemian vote, which caused the Hapsburgs to regard this election as null and void.

In 1777 the younger, Bavarian line of the house of Wittelsbach became extinct by the death of Maximilian III, and the Elector Palatine, Charles Theodore, according to the Treaty of Pavia, concluded in 1329 between the two Wittelsbach branches, inherited Bavaria and the electoral vote and technically now had two electoral votes. This, however, was not accepted by the other Electors and so the other, Palatine, vote lapsed in 1778.

The final great change in the Electoral College occurred in 1803 after Napoleon had been granted the left bank of the Rhine and even some territory on the right side of that river in the Treaty of Campo Formio in 1797 and the Treaty of Luneville in 1801. The Electors of Cologne and Trier were completely suppressed and the Elector of Mayence, who also lost his territory, was transferred to Regensburg and made Chancellor of the Empire. Furthermore, four new Electors were created. One was that of Salzburg, which bishopric was at the same time transferred into a temporal dukedom and given to the Austrian Archduke Ferdinand III of Tuscany. The second was the Elector of Wurttemberg. The third was the Elector of Baden, and the fourth the Elector of Hessen Cassel. These new Electors had no household offices and, in fact, never even exercised their electoral rights because the Empire was dissolved three years later in 1806. The title of Elector thereafter disappeared and was resurrected as a mere title without any actual significance in 1815 for the Elector of Hessen Cassel only, who retained it and showed it on his coins until 1866 when Hessen Cassel was finally annexed by Prussia.

Paragraphs From My Personal Diary

By MISS VIOLA BRUECKER
Berkeley, Cal.

(Paper presented to the Detroit Convention of the A. N. A.)

My Favorite Coin.

There is no coin in my collection that has given me more pleasure and enjoyment than the Lincoln head cent. I have just completed a Lincoln head cent board, which has meant checking thousands of cents and hours of studying and examining each coin—looking for what I thought only condition, mint marks and dates—but I also found the portrait of Lincoln had become more than just a grand President that I had read about in school—a friend.

The kindly but stern face doesn't remind me of wars, depressions or so many other episodes that make history, but sympathy, consideration and understanding. This coin as no other reminds me of courage beyond reproach and instills in me a greater desire to try and be a good citizen and one my country can be proud of.

The Orphan.

One day while talking to a friend the subject of coin collecting came up and my friend said: "I have a lot of old coins I inherited from an aunt of mine, but I am not interested in coins, so they don't mean anything to me."

On asking to see them I was shown several gold pieces, including some $3 gold coins, some of scarce date; twenty or more Trade dollars, many early dates in cents, half cents, three-cent silver pieces and many other U. S. coins, and also some nice foreign coins. Most of the coins were in uncirculated condition with even some proofs among them.

On expressing surprise at seeing such a beautiful collection, which incidentally was thrown into an old box, my friend informed me of having had a lot more but that some had been lost and others just given away.

The collection had been some one's pride and joy and no doubt greatly cherished, but now meaningless to its new owner, who carelessly tossed the coins back into the box.

I turned away with a lump in my throat and resolved then and there to make definite arrangements regarding my collection so that some day it would have a real home where it would bring as much joy to some one as it had to me and be treated with the respect and fond handling rightfully due any collection.

Do Unto Others.

To be happy, be honest with your Fellow-Collector.

1. Don't take advantage of the trust and confidence a fellow-collector might have in you.
2. Don't deliberately and for your advantage underrate the price on a coin.
3. Show respect to a collection regardless of size or value.
4. When selling a coin don't try to kid yourself and an innocent buyer by insisting the coin is uncirculated when in your own heart you know it isn't.
5. If some one unknowingly wants to sell you an uncirculated 1864 L Indian Head, don't conveniently overlook the L and offer him the price of just the regular 1864 cent.
6. Don't, if a coin is left with you to study for a trade-in or sale, substitute it for one of your own that isn't just as good.
7. Don't collect and hoard with just one thought—"Profiteering."
8. If some one unfamiliar with a coin asks your opinion as to value, don't appear dumb, knowing by doing so there is the possibility of acquiring it for a song.

9. Don't belittle and laugh at the collector who proudly shows you a coin that is of old vintage, smooth, but of no value.

10. Don't be a collector in name only, but a regular numismatist, a credit to the hobby and the meaning of the word numismatics.

Coins Of More Than Usual Interest

By DAVID M. BULLOWA
New York City

A SERIES: VI—Australian Territorial Gold

The American gold rush commenced in 1849. Three years later gold was discovered in Australia. The discovery of gold in a community always creates a currency problem. The immediate result is usually a drop in the local price of gold, as there is more gold present and less of currency. The usual circulating form for gold in mining communities is in dust form.

In Southern Australia the situation was very serious in 1852. A panic and a financial crisis were approaching rapidly. Some gold was present, but not any hard money. To solve the problem the local bankers suggested that the Government Assay Office issue small circulating ingots. Against these ingots the banks might issue notes which could circulate temporarily. Early in 1852 the Council passed the "Bullion Act" which authorized the issue of these ingots. The right of the Council to give this authority was questionable, since the Crown reserved this right as a rule. The technicality on which the authority was based stated that the ingots were to have the weight, value, fineness and date stamped upon them, but nowhere does any mention of a "coinage" appear. The Government notice refers to the "one-pound gold tokens"!

The obverse of these specimens shows an Imperial Crown within an ornamental border. Below the crown is the date, 1852. The border reads GOVERNMENT ASSAY OFFICE * ADELAIDE *

The reverse, VALUE ONE POUND within a border, the margin, WEIGHT, 5 DWT 15 GRS * 22 CARATS * The coinage, it will be noted, is of the same fineness as the standard British coinage of the period (916 thousandths), but the weight is greater than the standard sovereign by almost ten per cent.

This difference in value was due to the fact that at that time, according to some sources, 100 pounds in London could be purchased for 95 pounds South Australian currency.

The emergency coinage served its purpose well, and in the course of twelve months, the circulating life originally intended for the pieces, the issue was withdrawn and regular Australian sovereigns and half sovereigns with the head of Queen Victoria upon the obverse were issued, the first being dated 1855 and struck at Sydney.

At the time the Adelaide specimens were struck an issue of two-pound and five-pound pieces was also contemplated.

The "Adelaide" sovereign is a territorial gold coin with a history fully as interesting as that of our own American pieces.

Early Currency Of The Oregon Country

By GEORGE A. PIPES
Portland, Ore.

(Paper presented to the Detroit Convention of the A. N. A.)

It was in 1811 that John Jacob Astor's first ship sailed into the mouth of the Columbia, and there on its shore he established an outpost for his fur-trading company, and founded Astoria. That was the first white settlement in the Oregon Country, a vast region of forests, gleaming rivers and snow-capped mountain peaks, and limitless desert plains. In the coast region was the sea otter, and further inshore the beaver with its precious silky fur. Through a succession of reverses Astor was compelled to abandon his enterprise and sell out to a more successful rival in the fur trade, the Northwest Company, which had been organized in Montreal and had lately entered the territory. With this company came the famous Dr. John McLoughlin, who played such an important role in the drama of the pioneers. His head adorns the Vancouver half dollar.

In procuring furs the Northwest Company engaged its own trappers, and also obtained a great many from the Indians by barter. Money was unknown in these transactions. The company maintained a store of merchandise especially for traffic with the Indians. The stock consisted chiefly of guns, ammunition, beads and whiskey. Of these simple wants of the aborigines only one seems to hold any attraction for the whites.

How was business carried on? Like that of all monopolies. The fur-trading company fixed the price of its own merchandise, and also the price at which it would accept the pelts. As the company suffered no competition, it is safe to assume it did not get the worst of it in these transactions. For a beaver skin, the Indian would be allowed about two dollars in trade at the stores. In a short time this skin became the standard of value in all transactions, even among the Indians themselves. In 1820 the Northwest Company issued copper tokens in exchange for skins, which were redeemable at the company's stores. This is the token described in Mr. Breton's work on Canadian coins, being No. 925. It is rare, but not so scarce as the author believed. The Indians wore these pieces on a string around their necks, and that is why they are usually found holed. The token bears the bust of George IV of England, and the date 1820. On the reverse appears the figure of a beaver on a log, and the legend, "Northwest Company." No other currency during the fur-trading days has been discovered, other than strings of little hard sea shells used by the Indians on the coast. These were about six feet in length, and had a definite value.

In 1821 the Northwest Company was absorbed by the Hudson's Bay Company, a powerful monopoly, operating under a charter granted a hundred and fifty years before by Charles II of England. This company functioned not only as a commercial organization, but it exercised governmental powers as well, akin to the East India Company that ruled India before Victoria was made Empress. Dr. McLoughlin was made the executive head or "factor" of the Hudson's Bay Company, and ruled a territory as large as a kingdom as an absolute despot, but with a wisdom and benevolence seldom equaled in history. His stern justice, administered upon natives and whites alike, preserved law and order and peace with the Indians. His great generosity was unprecedented. In later years hundred of immigrant families would reach the territory destitute, and it was Dr. McLoughlin who maintained them for months without compensation and without security.

In 1834 came the first missionaries to tell the heathen Indian of another Great Father and of a happier Hunting Ground. These made a settlement at Champoege, now a deserted village and maintained as a historic shrine. The missionaries brought with them a few cattle and a small quantity of seed wheat. They cleared their land and planted their grain. This was the beginning of agriculture in the Oregon Country. Some of the trappers, grown weary of their solitary calling, joined the little band of missionaries and took up farming. By 1840 the community numbered 200, which, exclusive of employees of the Hudson's Bay Company, represented the entire white population of the entire Northwest. At about this time Dr. McLoughlin discovered the fur business was almost at an end because of the growing scarcity of animals, and realized his company must turn to new fields for profit. The opportunity was the development of farming. Land was cleared and granaries were built. And then came the covered wagon days. Creeping across mountains and plains plodded the immigrants from the crowded East to take up land and conquer the wilderness. They formed a town at Oregon City and organized a government known in history as the Provisional Government. They established courts and elected officers. By 1848 the population of the town had increased to 800, which made it the largest community west of the Mississippi River.

There was practically no money. An improvised currency developed in a natural manner. The people got their supplies from the stores of the Hudson's Bay Company in exchange for their farm products, principally wheat, which was accepted by the Company at a price of 50 cents per bushel. This wheat was stored in the warehouses of the company, and receipts were issued which were redeemable at the company's stores in merchandise. These receipts were negotiable and became the principal currency. The Legislature of the Provisional Government, by an act known as the Gray Currency Law of 1845, made them legal tender for the payment of debts and taxes. This kind of currency did well enough for important business, but left the settlers powerless to make change in small transactions.

George Abernathy, a storekeeper in Oregon City, attempted to solve the problem. To flint stones left by the manufacture of arrow heads he glued pieces of paper on which were written his initials and the amount of money each piece represented, and these pieces were redeemable at his store. This experiment was evidently not successful, for only one of these "Abernathy Stones," as they were called, remains to confirm the story. It is in the possession of a gentleman in Seattle.

Then something else happened to change the medium of exchange. In August, 1848, gold was discovered in California. There was a mad rush to the new El Dorado. The farmers left their plows to join in the quest for sudden riches. And in a few months many straggled home to family and friends with their pockets bulging with buckskin bags of gold. Yellow dust became the new currency. But still the problem of money was not solved. Scales for weighing the metal were scarce and many were inaccurate. A great deal was lost through handling, and then there was the difficulty of determining fineness. The merchants, to play safe, would allow but $11 or $12 to the ounce, when sixteen was the Government price. Because of these grievances a body of influential citizens petitioned the legislature for relief. That petition resulted in the enactment on February 16 of a statute establishing a territorial mint at Oregon City and authorizing the coining of $5 and $10 gold pieces. Both pieces were to be stamped on one side with appropriate Roman numerals indicating the denomination, and on the other, the legend "Oregon Territory," with the date and the arms of Oregon in the center. The arms represented a beaver on a log, and seems to be identical with the figure of the beaver on the Northwest Token of 1820.

But Oregon had just been admitted as a Territory of the United States. The new Territorial Governor, appointed by the President, was General Joseph Lane, afterwards running mate with Breckenridge in the campaign for President in 1860. He arrived at Oregon City a few days after the session of the Legislature, but immediately on March 3 issued a proclamation that Oregon was under jurisdiction of the United States Constitution, and that the attempted establishment of a territorial mint was an infringement on the exclusive function of the Federal Government and was of no effect. And that was that.

But American enterprise was not to be squelched. A group of public-spirited citizens formed a company and established a private mint and began to issue gold coins as originally planned. These are the famous "beaver" coins so highly prized by collectors of pioneer gold. The $10 piece is extremely rare, owing to the fact it contained more gold than its face, and consequently most of them in circulation were soon melted and sold for bullion. The workmanship is very good considering the limited facilities of the time. The die for the $5 piece was engraved by a Methodist missionary with no professional training, and the machinery for rolling the gold and stamping the coins was constructed by a blacksmith from pieces of scrap iron and old wagon tires. The original dies are now in the possession of the Oregon Historical Society. Both coins have the figure of a beaver on a log, similar to the Northwest token of 1820. Below is the date, "1849." On the reverse, within a wreath, is "130 G. Native Gold 5 D."

The money problem was solved to some degree by the issue of the beaver gold. There was still, however, some difficulty about making small change. By this time commerce had begun with California, and that resulted in the importation of a quantity of Mexican and South American silver coins, pieces-of-eight and rudely cut segments called "bits." That is the original of the expressions "two bits" and "four bits," so commonly used in the West.

The covered wagon kept bringing in new arrivals from the East and the border States, and the Oregon Territory continued to grow. But how sparsely settled was this region is indicated by the Federal census of 1850, from which it appears that on an average there were but three white people in every hundred square miles of territory.

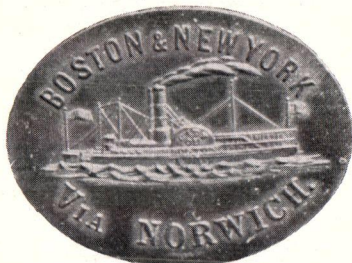

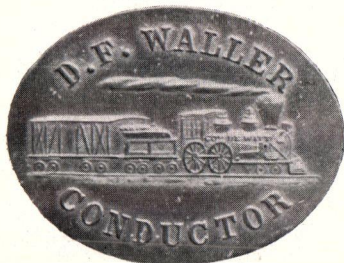

In 1854 a mint was established in San Francisco, and there was no further occasion for emergency currency. Soon there was plenty of money, but the real problem was then, as it is now, how to get it.

Transportation Tokens

By B. MORGENTHAU
New York City

(Read at a recent meeting of the Bronx Coin Club.)

It may not be generally known that in addition to collecting transportation tokens I have long been engaged in compiling a history of the media as represented by the tokens themselves. It is no child's play, I can assure you, with its continual correspondence, research, and—patience. The responses, however, as far as I have gone, are most gratifying. They are highly informative, educating and, in some instances, tinged with a touch of human interest. All in all, I feel more than compensated for the time and labor involved. This occasion being inopportune for discussion of the various phases of the work, I shall confine myself to but three outstanding cases illustrative of the unalloyed joy that awaits one through the persistent and diligent application to his chosen hobby.

First is that of the "Norwich Line Boat Train" represented by the oval hard-rubber token on display here. Although the information was "just around the corner," it took me three years to discover that this train, with its outmoded "Coe De Witt" locomotive, made its initial run March 9, 1840, from Boston to Norwich via the Boston & Worcester Railroad to Worcester and the Norwich & Worcester Railroad to Norwich. On December 7, 1843, the terminal was changed to Allens Point. David F. Waller, whose name appears on the token, was one of the earliest conductors of this train. Perforce of being his personal "business card" with no economic bearing upon the railroad itself, it cannot consistently be termed a transportation token, hence it joins my family of "Transportation Items." It will prove interesting to learn that on September 11, 1848, Abraham Lincoln, making his maiden trip to New England, journeyed over this line from New York to Worcester, arrived at his destination the following morning and delivered an address that same night at the Worcester City Hall.

Second on the list is the aluminum token of "Minshall's Bus Line," Viroqua, Wis. From Mr. Frank M. Minshall, of good health and memory, still keenly alive to the passing events of the day at the ripe old age of 90, comes the information that the bus line was established by him in 1880. It operated between the railroad depot and hotel or any part of the city for 25 cents the round trip. The line was discontinued in 1900. Mr. Minshall stated that he had no knowledge of anyone else in possession of one of the tokens. Also is the proud statement that the population of Viroqua, "the best little town in the State," by heck, "is 3555, a gain of 763 over the 1930 census!"

Third is the so-called "unique" McPherson (Kan.) Street Railway, unique no longer by reason of my having secured a second specimen. This company was owned by Mr. Will West, now deceased, and was operated by him from 1890 to 1896 during a period when this particular section of the country, due to a land boom, was developing rapidly. The fare was 5 cents, the cars, horse drawn. A daughter of Mr. West, now in full enjoyment of her 70 years, used to run one of the cars in her youth.

Thus will be seen that the collecting of transportation tokens assumes a new importance when coupled with historic facts.

Moneys Of The World

An Address By VERNON L. BROWN

Curator of the Chase National Bank Collection of Moneys of the World, September 30, 1940, at 4 o'clock, at Columbia Lecture Hall of the Columbia Broadcasting System.

Don't take any wooden nickels! No doubt you often have heard this facetious advice, but do you know that wooden nickels actually have been accepted as money in many communities during the last seven years? Mr. Welch, the announcer, did not believe me when I told him that wooden money had really been used in this country. To prove it I have just given him a wooden nickel that was issued in Newberry, South Carolina, in connection with its sesqui-centennial celebration held in May, 1939. Of course he can't go out and spend it now, but at that time any merchant or bank in the city of Newberry would have accepted it. I might add that the wooden nickels printed during the last few years generally were issued locally in connection with special historical celebrations.

Yes, money is an interesting object. By it we can trace the rise and fall of empires, the economic and political disturbances in countries, and even many expressions common today owe their origin to forms of money. For instance, "Dixie," in reference to the South, comes from an old $10 note issued by the Citizens Bank of New Orleans before the Civil War. This note was printed in two languages, French and English, and the French for ten is dix. As these notes circulated throughout the Southern States, that section became known as the land of the dixies. Another term frequently heard today is "two bits," meaning twenty-five cents. In some localities, especially in the South and the West, the people, in order to make change in the early Colonial days, would take the eight reales coin of Spain, struck in Mexico, which was equal in value to the United States dollar, and cut it into four equal parts. One part was therefore a segment of or a "bit" of the original eight reales coin, and since it was equivalent to two reales or 25 cents, our quarter is referred to as "two bits." Also, the eight reales piece is the coin referred to in Stevenson's "Treasure Island" when the pirates are searching for the "pieces-of-eight."

Every year we have a large number of visitors at the exhibit. Several years ago a visitor came in and in a very polite and serious manner said:

"My friends told me not to miss seeing the Latin Quarter while in New York, so will you please show me one." As soon as I had straightened her out on this point, I showed her some interesting Greek and Roman coins. She was thrilled to see one of the first silver coins from Aegina, an island off the coast of Greece, that was struck about 700 B. C. The next coin that caught her eye was the tetradrachm of Alexander the Great of Macedon, issued around 330 B. C. Alexander was the first human to have his likeness portrayed on a coin. Other kings followed this practice and in the exhibit are coins showing the portraits of various Roman Emperors—Julius Caesar, Augustus, Nero, and others. The coins of the Bible then attracted the attention of our visitor and her eyes brightened as she recalled her Sunday-school days while looking at the shekel, tribute penny, and widow's mite.

With the decline of the Roman Empire the art of striking coins also declined. During this period metal money became debased in intrinsic value and lost its general acceptability. It was not until late in the sixteenth century that the medallist art began to show any decided improvement. Many specimens of these medieval German, Italian and English coins are on display. Of this period the coins of Henry VIII of England are interesting as he made some in copper and then silver plated them before placing the pieces in circulation. As soon as they had a little circulation the silver would wear off, showing the king with a copper nose, so Henry VIII was often referred to as "Old Copper Nose."

Man has not always used metals as a medium of exchange. Centuries before the invention of coins, goods were bought and sold by barter. Values were estimated in terms of cattle and grain, and there are several references in the Bible to men being rich in cattle. Even though the barter and trade system dates back thousands of years, it is still practiced today in some countries and on certain occasions. Some of the commodities that have been used as an exchange medium and which are on display in the exhibit include brick tea, cocoa beans, silk and salt.

In addition to commodities the natives of Africa and the South Sea Islands use wampum and various odd and curious forms of money. The native is happy when he can rival his neighbor with evidence of wealth, which generally takes the form of some personal adornment. The inhabitants of the Solomon Islands use currency made of shells, seeds, fibre armlets, and dog's teeth. Among the odd pieces used by the natives of Africa is a piece of twisted iron metal. It looks like a back-scratcher, but it is a "penny" used by the Gizi Tribe of Liberia. In the Belgian Congo a copper cross, made to resemble a boomerang, is used by the natives in the purchase of a wife. Another specimen of money that is worth a wife is the large stone from the Island of Yap. This stone looks like an old millstone, is thirty inches in diameter and weighs 170 pounds. It is one of the most fascinating and interesting pieces in the Chase exhibit. An unusual contrast in size of coins is shown by the eight-daler copper piece of Sweden, weighing 31 pounds, and the small gold coin of Southern India, which is about the size of a pin head and weighs one grain.

When the early settlers came to America they brought with them little or no currency. Consequently they used the wampum of the Indians as a medium of exchange. To partially offset this lack of currency the people in the Colony of Massachusetts Bay in 1650 issued some silver coins. These pieces were known as New England shillings, and were relatively plain in design. However, the design on the coin was soon changed because the people would clip off part of the silver and use it for other purposes. In 1652 the famous Pine Tree shilling was struck, and this coin, because of its all-over design with the pine tree in the center was not as easy to clip as the earlier piece. These shillings were struck for about thirty years but they always bore the same date, 1652.

The United States mint was established in 1793. Large one-cent copper pieces were the first coins struck for general circulation, and since 1793 the Government has issued one-cent pieces in every year except 1815. Nearly everyone is familiar with the Indian head cent but not many people realize that the portrait on this coin is that of a young girl with the headdress of an Indian chief, and is not that of a real Indian. An interesting fact about the Lincoln head cent is that in 1909 the coin was struck with the designer's initials V. D. B. on the reverse and later taken off because of much criticism. From 1909 to 1918 the coin was issued without the initials but in 1918 the Government quietly replaced them. However, the initials are not on the reverse as they were in 1909, but are located on the obverse in the truncation below the shoulder of Lincoln.

Speaking of American coins, I would like to ask a few questions. You handle coins of various denominations every day, but how much do you know about the pieces? Do you know who designed them, the significance of the design, and can you tell in which mint they were struck? Do you know that certain inscriptions must appear on our silver coins, that the motto "In God We Trust" may appear on them but it is not required by law, and that the design on our coins may be changed every twenty five years without an act of Congress? It was because of this last provision that the five-cent piece was changed from the Indian-buffalo type which was first issued in 1913 to the Jefferson nickel in 1938.

The earliest known paper money is attributed to China in the Ming Dynasty, 1366-1399 A. D. It was printed on paper made from the bark of the mulberry tree and is 8x13½ inches in size. Among the thousands of notes that we have on display are bills issued by the Continental Congress, notes issued by private banks and corporations, Confederate Currency, and the various types of notes issued by our Government. The Continental bills depreciated to such an extent after the Revolutionary War that it gave rise to the expression "Not worth a Continental." The Confederate currency is also practically worthless today, and about the only notes that have a special value are those in the $50, $100, $500 and $1000 denominations that were issued in Montgomery, Alabama, in 1861, before the capital was moved to Richmond, Virginia.

The Government issued its first circulating paper money in 1861, and these notes were called "greenbacks." In 1863 national banks were authorized and were given the privilege of issuing notes for circulation without paying a tax. This practically prohibited the private and State banks from issuing notes. However, the Bank of Mecklenburg, Charlotte, North Carolina, did not join the National Banking System, but issued some of its own notes as late as 1875. It is one of the few banks ever to pay the 10 per cent. tax on private bank issues as required by the National Banking Act. Following the passage of this act National Banks issued notes until 1935. Today there are only three types of paper money being printed for circulation at the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, Washington, D. C., namely, the United States note, with red seal and numbers; the Federal Reserve note, with green seal and numbers; and the silver certificate, with blue seal and numbers. Two items in the Chase exhibit that create a great deal of interest are the $2 note with a $1 back—an error in printing—and the $10,000 note, the largest denomination that is printed for circulation.

In addition to the regular paper money we have over 2,000 specimens of scrip that were issued or prepared to be issued during the depression years 1932 and 1933. Specimens from every State, including the District of Columbia and Hawaii, are in this collection and some of the pieces are printed on wood, rubber, leather, sheepskin and buckskin. Also on display are many interesting financial documents, especially checks signed by noted Americans, such as George Washington and Abraham Lincoln.

The material covered in this talk is only a brief description of what is on display in the bank's exhibit of over 50,000 specimens. Besides the pieces I have described, it contains currencies of all countries and many rarities, such as the dekadrachm of Syracuse struck about 400 B. C.; platinum coins of Russia; gold $50 slugs of California; and an 1804 silver dollar, of which only fourteen are known, and one has an auction record of $3600. The exhibit graphically illustrates what man has used as a medium of exchange for over 5000 years and is excellent for educational purposes. Here one can see more types of money in fifteen minutes than probably anywhere else in the world. Some teachers in the metropolitan area bring their students in to see the exhibit year after year. The exhibit is open to the public and a cordial invitation is extended to you to visit it when in New York. If you are interested in receiving a small booklet describing the collection it will be sent free of charge if you will write to the Chase National Bank Exhibit of Moneys, 46 Cedar Street, New York, N. Y.

Although the collecting of classical Greek coins is today very popular among collectors, there is no proof that the Greeks themselves collected them.

Editorial Comment—Numismatic News

SHOULD WE HAVE SOME NEW COIN DESIGNS?

September, 1890, marks the passage of the bill discontinuing the coinage of the $3 gold coin and the three-cent nickel piece.

It was also the date of the act which provided for the coinage design change which took place in 1892. The act is important in that it provided that the designs of our coins should not be changed oftener than once in twenty-five years. Thus, in a period of fifty years we have had at least two designs for every denomination coined, with the exception of the nickel and quarter of which there are now three types, struck within the past fifty years. The act of 1890 indicated that a changed design of the five-cent piece would be desirable, but no change was made until 1913.

In view of the fact that the 1890 act presaged the change of design in 1892, it would seem desirable that designs be essayed during the coming months if our coins of the cent, nickel, dime, and half dollar are to be revised. A public competition, such as that which produced the Jefferson nickel, would be welcomed by the sculptors.

A return to the Fugio type for the cent, with a portrait of Franklin, might be desirable for the small cent. Collectors might write the editor regarding their ideas, as to the prospective designs for our national coinage.

UNIQUE PORTUGUESE CRUZADO RECENTLY LOCATED IN NEW YORK.

A gold coin which is considered absolutely unique has recently been located. The coin was issued in the reign of Dom Joao II, who reigned from 1481 to 1495 and was known as "the Perfect Prince."

It was during the reign of this ruler that Bartholomew Diaz rounded the Cape of Good Hope in the name of Portugal. Prince Henry the Navigator flourished during this period. The famous Treaty of Tordesillas, by which the claims of territory between Portugal and Castile (Spain) were settled, was signed in 1494, and it allocated to the Portuguese the eastern side of a certain longitude, and to Spain the western part. Thus, what is known as Brazil today, Portuguese speaking, is directly the result of this treaty. The treaty was signed by both parties, the Pope having been the arbiter who determined the spheres of their respective influence.

The obverse shows the crowned arms of Portugal with the Aviz cross with a circle of 6 arcs. IOANES : SECUNDO : REGIS : The reverse shows the Cross of St. George within a border of alternate arcs and angles: IOANIS : SECUDI : REGI : PORTU :

Aragon's standard work on Portuguese coins lists nothing similar to this coin, except that an unpublished issue of John II and his father Alfonso V, issued about 1477, has the same reverse inscription, but on the obverse type. The Santos collection of Portuguese coins, sold in 1906, in Amsterdam, lists no coin even approximating the above described specimen. The British Museum does not have a specimen. The piece is approximately the size of our half-eagle, but considerably thinner.

Any collectors having Portuguese gold coins of this period in their collections, which are of presumably unknown type, are asked to write the editor, giving full details.

ANOTHER 1940 CAMPAIGN TOKEN.

The 1940 Presidential campaign just closed has been remarkable for the number of varieties of celluloid lapel "buttons" placed in circulation. These have been fairly well divided between the dignified and the other kind.

Few medals or metal tokens have made their appearance. Last month we illustrated a rather large one, and this month we show a smaller one, sent by Dr. M. W. Emrick, of Harrisburg, Pa., which he says has been circulating around that city. It is struck in light bronze and is the size of illustration. We have no details as to its origin.

SECTIONAL NUMISMATIC MEETINGS.

In order that The Numismatist may publish in advance notice of a sectional meeting in your locality, please advise the Editor in full, sufficiently in advance, so that space may be devoted to it. In this way you will secure the attendance of those readers of The Numismatist who might not be contacted through local clubs.

JAPAN'S MILITARY YEN UNPOPULAR IN CHINA.

Reports from Southern China indicate that the forced Japanese currency is not very popular. Hongkong dollars still retain there, according to recent advices, their former favor. Hongkong dollar notes of the HK$500 denomination are the favorite liquid reserve investment.

EARLY DOCUMENT REGARDING HALF DIMES LOCATED.

Through the courtesy of Prof. Chas. N. Schmall, of New York, a very interesting numismatic document has been brought to light. Professor Schmall has the original document and has consented to have a transcription published in The Numismatist. It follows:

Dear Sir: I mentioned to you in my last letter that the director of the mint would let me have the half-dimes required. He, a day or two ago called upon me to let me know that I could have them coined immediately. Accordingly, I went to the coiner this day and he told me that they have not coined half dimes these past 6 months, nor will they these three months to come, but if you will have whole dimes you can get them at any time. The coiner tells me that there will be a small loss. You will understand that I shall have to purchase crowns or dollars to have coined into dimes.

Be pleased to write me immediately upon the subject and if dimes will answer I will get them. I shall be in this city till the last of next week.

I am your humble Servant,

James Cochran.

July 13, 1798, Philadelphia.
To Mr. Gerait Van Schaack.

The Director of the Mint at the time was Elias Boudinot, who had been appointed Director in 1795 by President Washington. The mint was closed during the summer and autumn of 1797 and the two following years because of the yellow fever epidemic.

The coiner referred to above was Henry Voight. Voight was also an appointee of President Washington, having received his appointment in January, 1793. He was a clockmaker by trade and was well known for his mechanical knowledge and skill.

From the text of the document it would appear that no half dimes were to be coined until the middle of October 1798. We know, however, that no half dimes were coined until 1800, and that none were coined bearing the date 1798.

It is also interesting to observe that bullion had to be brought to the mint for the coinage of the smaller denominations and that there was a charge for silver coinage, of $\frac{1}{2}$ or 1 per cent. It must be remembered that the mint was young in 1798 and that no funds for the maintenance of bullion had been appropriated. The bullion was brought to the Mint by the depositor, who had to wait several weeks, perhaps even a few months, before that very bullion could be coined into the United States denominations requested.

Cochran was a member of one of the first Congresses in Philadelphia.

SYRIAN MERCHANTS PREFER U. S. A. NOTES.

The Syrian pound, which is linked to the French franc, is a rather uncertain quantity. As a result, Syrian merchants prefer to hold their merchandise if they cannot obtain Turkish or British gold coins or U. S. or British circulating notes. An American dollar bill is now worth 350 Syrian piastres, although the official rate is only 219.50 piastres. The greatest demand, however, is for the British gold sovereigns, as these have advanced most in value from a former official rating of 1,889.83 piastres to the present quotation of 4,400 piastres.

COLOMBIA COUNTERMARKING SILVER COINS.

Colombia is one of the first countries to legally discourage collecting. A law was promulgated last July prohibiting the trade in gold coins. A further law has required the countermarking of any silver piece weighing over one Troy ounce by the Government Mint or an accredited assay office which is offered for sale.

BOOK REVIEW.

Temples of Rome As Coin Types. By Donald F. Brown, Numismatic Notes and Monographs, No. 90. American Numismatic Society, New York, 1940. 52 pp., 9 plates.

As mentioned in the note preceeding the text of the monograph, a group of students have been studying the buildings of Rome as represented upon the coinage for a number of years. This monograph presents some of the findings of Mr. Brown following an intensive search of catalogues and coins on two continents for five years.

The coins presented in the present monograph are those upon which temples are shown which are known to have existed within the city of Rome.

The reasons for the use of the temple type upon the coinage are fully presented, and the various structures are divided into four main groups according to the method of representation.

Constant mention of the actual temple in question, with a plate showing the structure, makes the reading of this monograph most worthwhile and lucid.

It is obvious from an even casual glance of the monograph that much painstaking effort was required in its preparation. Mr. Brown has produced a very compact and systematic review of what would otherwise appear to be a very haphazard system of divinities. An outstanding contribution to numismatics is his observation that some of the temples represented on the coinage merely represented prospective edifices.

Although by no means a book for the beginner in Roman coins, it still presents much material in condensed form which will be greatly valued by classical students. Further publications in the numismatic-architectural field will be greatly welcomed and prove of lasting use if they continue on the scholarly level of Mr. Brown's forerunner.

LATEST NEWS REPORTS.

Egypt—Several items have appeared in The Numismatist during the past few months regarding the high price commanded by gold coins in the Near East. News now reaches us that as a result of rumors the price of British gold sovereigns advanced from the normal of about 213 piastres to as high as 402 piastres in May. The rumors stated that the Egyptian currency would be revalued, but emphatic denials succeeded in again restoring confidence. (The Egyptian pound is divided into 100 piastres.)

Spain—A new Spanish currency may be expected to make its appearance shortly. The new coins of the 5-centimo and 10-centimo values will be made of an aluminum and copper alloy. Approximately estimated, the new coinage will be about 31 million pesetas. The coins are being struck to provide the necessary change required for general transactions. Reports indicate that street-car tickets, subway tickets, and postage stamps now circulate freely as change.

Switzerland—Switzerland has again made plans for the issue of 5-franc bank notes, as a news report indicates that 56 million new bank notes of all denominations from 5 francs to 1000 francs are being prepared. Switzerland has not had bank notes below the 20-franc value for about 15 years.

The article on "U. S. Colonial Coins Bearing Washington's Portrait," by W. H. Arthur, which appeared in the October issue of The Numismatist, was reprinted by the "Pass Book," house organ of the Central Savings Bank in New York, with which Mr. Arthur is associated.

THE GEORGE CROSS OF GREAT BRITAIN.

One of the first Allied medals of the present World War to come to our attention is the George Cross, issued as a mark of gallantry in action.

The obverse shows a figure of Britannia seated to the right, with the sun in full blaze. The inscription reads FOR GOD AND THE EMPIRE. The exergue carries the single word: GALLANTRY with a palm leaf.

Details have not yet been received here regarding the colors of the ribbon, or the size of the medal.

A. N. A. CONVENTION GROUP AT THE FORD ROTUNDA.

On the opposite page we reproduce the group photograph taken at the Ford Rotunda during the Detroit Convention of the A. N. A. in August, which reached us too late to be used in the October issue. It has the advantage of being a single photograph, and not divided, as was necessary in the one taken in front of the hotel the preceding day.

THE CRANE MEDAL PRESENTED TO HARRY T. WILSON.

We are fortunate in being able to illustrate here for the first time the Faithful Service medal of the Crane Company of Chicago, Ill., given to employees of the company since 1915 upon the completion of 25 years' service.

The obverse shows the portrait of the company's founder, R. T. Crane, and the date, 1855. The top bar reads: CRANE VETERAN LEAGUE ORGANIZED 1915. The medal is gold, and is issued by Tiffany & Co. of New York. The particular medal here reproduced, by the courtesy of M. Vernon Sheldon was issued to Harry T. Wilson, the former General Secretary of the American Numismatic Association in 1916. Mr. Wilson, who died suddenly last summer, had earned three additional bars reading: 30 YEARS, 35 YEARS and 40 YEARS. The reverse of the medal reads: PRESENTED TO HARRY T. WILSON. Mr. Wilson was of such a retiring and modest nature that few if any members in our Association knew that he had earned this distinction.

A VARIETY OF DENVER MINT QUARTER.

I have just uncovered another variety of coin. This is the type Liberty standing quarter from the Denver Mint, without stars under eagle. Two varieties: One with small "d" and another with large "D." This variety is to be found in the 1917 coinage of this quarter.

A. N. A. CONVENTION GROUP AT THE FORD ROTUNDA.

WILLIAM PENN SUGGESTED A MINT IN NEW YORK IN 1700.

William Penn suggested in 1700 to the Earl of Bellomont, then Governor of New York, that a mint for small silver be established in New York. The New York Governor wrote as follows:

1. We are humbly of opinion for the more easy and certain commerce of the northern Colonies in America under the Crown of England; it would be convenient that there would be one standard or coin, or that money were of the same value; for in Boston that Ps of 8/8 6 shillings, goes in New York for 6 shillings 9 pence, in Jersey and in Pensilvania 7 shillings 8 pence, in Maryland 4 shillings 6 pence, Virginia at 5 shillings and in Carolina.

2. It would be much for the dispatch for trade and business, if a mint for small silver to the value of 6 pence were allowed in the City of New York for prevention of clipping and fileing, as well as wearing, which is very troublesome.

A true copy

(Signed) BELLOMONT

Heads of severall things proper for ye Plantations to be recommended home to England. (17 October 1700.)

The difficulties under which the Colonists did commerce is easily noted when the wide discrepancy in value between the same silver coin in different localities is taken into account.

It must be remembered that, from the above account, the "pieces of 8/8" brought the highest price in Pennsylvania, and for that reason it is obvious that many of them were clipped, and filed, for even if they were underweight, they could still bring more than they would legally bring in other Colonies. Because of this, the Governor of Pennsylvania wished to have smaller coins, and avoid having to accept the larger pieces in bad condition which were naturally flowing to the market that paid the best price. Gresham's law was operating, the better pieces were being made and the poor ones being circulated, mainly gravitating toward Pennsylvania.

It may be observed, also, that Maryland and Virginia, the agricultural Colonies, valued the coins at less than the commercial Colonies. Lord Baltimore had issued a small silver coinage, but Lord Penn and Lord Baltimore never followed in each other's footsteps.

No action was taken on the recommendations cited above. It was almost a century more before the Colonies, then States, had a unified coinage system, equal in all territories. But the mint was not in New York! Colonial history has numerous instances of the difficulty of doing business. Curiously enough, Pennsylvania, the home State of our national Mint, was one of the States which had no Colonial coinage.

THE CURACAO STIVER STILL A MYSTERY.

Several months ago an inquiry appeared in these pages regarding the place of mintage of the Curacao coins dated 1821. It was subsequently published in The Numismatist that the coins were struck at Willemstad, the capital of the colony, the source of the information being given.

Mr. John Van Der Meer, a collector of Dutch and Dutch Colonial coins, has stated that the information about the coins which was published is incorrect. Mr. Van Der Meer states: "The Royal Mint in the Netherlands does not know by whom or where the coins were made. The only thing definitely established is that during the administration of Governor Van Cantzalaer the coins were struck, and that the owner of a large shipyard in Curacao, a Mr. Joseph Foulke, placed the order in the United States. The records in the shipyards, which would show where the coins were struck, were destroyed by fire many years ago." Anyone knowing the further details regarding this coinage is requested to write the editor.

George III and his ministers in 1781 relied for success more upon the depressed financial condition of the United States than upon the aggressive operations of their army and navy.

NEW ISSUES AT HOME AND ABROAD.

It is a strange numismatic horizon upon which we now look. We have just come through a period of tremendous numismatic changes. The World War (1914-1918) was followed by financial convulsions, which had innumerable repercussions in the numismatics of the post-war years. During the course of the war there was a lull such as we are now undergoing.

Since the recent change in British monarchs there has been a general recoinage in the empire, such as has not occurred since 1911.

Our own American series are also in the commemorative afterglow; no new coinages proposed, and no old issues being recoinced. In the interim we must await developments. A news item in the philatelic columns recently suggested a Canadian-American postage stamp. Would not a joint Canadian-American coin be a worth-while endeavour to mark the achievement of these two peoples in maintaining an unfortified frontier of 3000 miles for over one hundred and twenty-five years?

A Pan-American commemorative coin might also have been issued by the Cuban Republic to mark the significance of the recent Havana conference. Numismatists will do well to follow the trends in philately to note the facility with which stamps are issued fully abreast of current happenings.

Neither tokens nor medals seem to be as freely issued for the political events of the day as have been issued in previous years for events of fully equal import.

An explanation of this condition would be welcomed, as it seems unfortunate that those who follow our numismatic footsteps will not have the mass of material to assemble, which will give meaning to our current history from small struck evidences, such as were frequently prepared previously.

Possibly one answer is that the token, jeton and medalet are a thing of the past and that they have given way to the "wooden nickel" and the other souvenirs of commemorative nature issued in imitation of money.

COPIES ON COINS ON ELEVATOR DOORS.

Anyone visiting Harrisburg, Pa., can find in the new Finance Building of the State Capitol Group something of interest to the numismatist. Reproductions of various coins occur on the elevator doors. There are eight plaques to a set of doors on six different elevators, and they occur on five of the floors of this building.

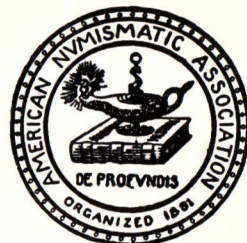

Among the coins reproduced are the Franklin cent, a Massachusetts Oak Tree shilling, a Spanish Pillar dollar, Portuguese, Greek and Roman coins, and a Chinese coin of the Ming Dynasty, Ta Chung Tung Pao, 1368-1398. The plaques are bronze and are seven inches in diameter.

MR. BULLOWA REAPPOINTED DIRECTOR OF COIN PURCHASES.

President Hoffercker of the A. N. A. announces that he has reappointed David M. Bullova, 95 Fifth Avenue, New York City, Director of Coin Purchases for the Moritz Wormser Memorial Collection of Coins at the Smithsonian Institution, Washington, D. C.

A. N. A. FINANCE COMMITTEE FOR 1940-1941.

L. W. Hoffercker, President of the A. N. A., announces the appointment of the following Finance Committee of the A. N. A. for the coming year:
 T. James Clarke, 38 Charles St., Jamestown, N. Y.
 Walter P. Nichols, 212 W. Emerson St., Melrose, Mass.
 Wilfred L. Rowe, 3154 Second Blvd., Detroit, Mich.

THE A. N. A. LIBRARY.

The American Numismatic Association Library now is installed in its new home at Burlington, Iowa, and is "open for business."

Due to the popularity of the new 50-Year Index, there is an increasing demand for single copies of The Numismatist of all dates, and donations of these will be appreciated. There is a greater need as well for bound and unbound volumes, and anyone willing to donate these will receive the thanks of hundreds. The library also is looking—as always—for volumes of the American Journal of Numismatics.

David M. Bullova donated a copy of Doughty's "United States Cents," and it already has been loaned twice. The library arrived September 21, and the first shipments of books went out the 22nd. There were 24 volumes loaned from Burlington during September, due primarily, however, to applications forwarded by former Librarian William Dewey, who has been most helpful in getting the new librarian started.

T. R. HAMMER, A. N. A. Librarian-Curator.

Burlington, Iowa.

THOMAS S. MCCREA DEAD.

We announce with regret the death of Thomas S. McCrea, of Federalsburg, Md. He was not a member of the A. N. A. He was not a numismatist nor a philatelist. Yet during his lifetime he had played an important part in the printing of The Numismatist and coin auction sales of several dealers, as well as the philatelic publications produced in the plant of the J. W. Stowell Printing Company of his home town. He was an expert linotype operator and for many years had put these publications in type. The Fifty-Year Index to The Numismatist was one of the latest publications that showed his handiwork.

He had not enjoyed the best of health the past year, and in September he entered the University of Maryland Hospital in Baltimore for an operation, from which he did not rally, and died on September 25. The funeral was held from his home in Federalsburg on September 28, at which his nineteen fellow-workers acted as honorary pallbearers. He is survived by his widow, one son and two married daughters.

NEW COIN CLUB IN INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

A coin club was organized at the Indianapolis (Ind.) Y. M. C. A. September 25. Officers are L. H. Riggs, president; W. E. Pollard, vice-president; Richard B. Whitney, secretary; S. G. Kasberg, treasurer, and Ray Fiscus, librarian-curator. The officers, all of whom reside in Indianapolis, comprise the board of governors.

This club will meet the fourth Wednesday, although the schedule may be "off" over the holidays, according to President Riggs, who long has been prominently identified with Indiana numismatics.

NEW YORK NUMISMATIC CLUB—382nd regular meeting, October 11, Arthur W. Deas, president, presiding. Nineteen members and two guests were present.

Mr. Deas opened the meeting by thanking the members for their token of sympathy which was received by him the last day he was in the hospital, and spoke of his pleasure at being able to be back at the meeting to preside.

The topics for the evening were Coins of Switzerland and Turkey, Large United States Cents, New York City Transportation Tokens.

Exhibits were made by the following:

L. Kusterer: Types of U. S. large cents.

W. H. Arthur: A representative type collection of large cents. Two notes, 5 cents and 1 dollar denominations, issued by S. W. & W. A. Torrey, State of New Jersey, June 15th, 1861, in crisp condition. A large bronze medal issued to commemorate the Exhibition of the Industry of All Nations, New York, 1853.

W. C. Blaisdell: Complete set of large cents, mostly uncirculated.

A. W. Deas: Wooden money of Marietta, Greenwich, Conn., New York State Fair 1940; American Air Mail Society, new medal. Washington, D. C., transportation tickets.

J. Barnet: World's Fair medals. Christian Science, Poland, 1840, in two metals, and Paderewski medal.

A. C. Semple: Political buttons: McKinley, McClellan, McKinley and Roosevelt, Louisiana World's Fair badge, 1904.

B. Morgenthau: 25 transportation tokens of Greater New York.

F. C. C. Boyd: Collection of New York City transportation tokens.

The Executive Committee suggested as the topic for the November meeting, Denarii of the Roman Republic; United States Silver and Nickel Three-Cent Pieces; Willkie and other 1940 campaign buttons, and new acquisitions. This was adopted.

Following the usual procedure, a nominating committee was elected unanimously to submit nominees for the year 1941, consisting of Mr. Barnet, chairman, Mr. Kusterer and Mr. Brown.

The membership committee reported the name of Lieut. Oscar H. Dodson, 3441 78th Street, Jackson Heights, Long Island.

Mr. Bullowa reported the annual dinner of the Bronx Coin Club and stated that Shepard Pond would read a paper at that dinner on October 23, and all members of the club were cordially invited to attend.

T. James Clarke reported the activities of the last A. N. A. convention and spoke of his pleasure at being with the club members.

BRONX COIN CLUB—Eighty-fifth regular meeting, September 25, called to order by President Stein. The evening had previously and appropriately been designated as the Hentgen Memorial meeting. Twenty-two members and five guests were present.

The secretary read an invitation from the Philadelphia Coin Club to have representation at their annual banquet early in October. Several members expressed their intention of participating. A notice from the American Numismatic Society advising the date and subject of a lecture early in October was also presented.

President Stein reported the untimely death of our member Dr. Herman Feith. The members rose in silent prayer in memory for our departed friend.

At the previous meeting the Secretary had been requested to investigate the cost of maps of the ancient Greek and Roman periods, and of a modern world map. Morton Stack stated that he had several maps which he would give to the club.

Mr. Stein read a very fine paper on the coinage of the Gaulish rulers during the Roman period, with special emphasis on the coinages of Didius Julianus, Laelianus, Marius and Postumus. It was very well received, and President Stein had an exhibit to augment the various points in his paper.

At the request of President Stein, Mr. Morgenthau read a brief paper he had prepared on transportation tokens, his favorite series. The paper will be published in The Numismatist. Mr. Dewey then read an article Shepard Pond, of Boston, Mass., had written in 1929, entitled "Kings of Portugal et Alg . . . in which interpretations of the meaning of this abbreviation are fully expanded.

President Stein then spoke about Mr. Hentgen and his love for the club, his generosity, which was evidenced by the many souvenirs which the members displayed, each of which had been personally given to them by Mr. Hentgen. Each member who had an exhibit connected with Mr. Hentgen then told of the circumstances surrounding its acquisition. There was a personal touch, which was indescribable, but it clearly showed in the manner of speech which he used. It was not like the subsequent describing of exhibits which followed, in which the items had been obtained at auction or private sale. These souvenirs, many Washington, or grist mill medals, had been made by Mr. Hentgen in his own workshop, to which he always referred as the "Bronx Mint." Although Mr. Hentgen had only been known to the Club's members for five or six years, he had in that short remaining span of years earned himself an enviable position in the hearts of the members of the Bronx Coin Club that knew and grew to love him, and who cherished his memory.

The regular exhibits of the club followed:

Mr. Arthur: Medal cast by Theodor Hentgen; obverse, Washington; reverse, "Award, Bronx Coin Club." Awarded by the club to Mr. Arthur for his exhibit at the Metropolitan Coin Club Exhibit, Rockefeller Center, 1936. Cast specially for him.

Mr. Blake: Two medals by Mr. Hentgen, one a birthday gift in 1938, the other having an 1838-D nickel embedded in it.

Mr. Bullowa: India, bank note of 10 rupees, George V; Spanish 1 and 5 peseta notes of 1937 and 1938, and 2 Hentgen medals.

Mr. Clark: Eleven World War medals from England, France and U. S.

Mr. Dewey: Two medals by Theodor Hentgen, showing Dewey on obverse and Washington on the reverse, dated "1898."

Mr. Engel: Excerpt from The Numismatist on "Philosophy of Collecting by Mr. Hentgen" (Vol. 51, p. 119).

Mr. Erlanger: Coins and medals concerning Emperor Charles VI, the last Hapsburg Holy Roman Emperor in the direct line, who died in 1740. Also silver medals on visit of Charles VI to Nuremberg following his coronation in 1712.

Mr. Gans: Stater of Lysimachus and two barbaric imitations, all gold.

Mr. Kimball: A Hentgen medal.

Mr. Kosoff: Three gold and one silver decoration.

Mr. Kortjohn: 33 convention (Detroit, 1940) photographs, badge and two Hentgen medals.

Mr. May: Prussia, Iron Cross, first class, for military merit; Mecklenburg-Strelitz, Cross for Military Bravery, first class; Papal States, medal for war with Piedmont, 1860; bar for Battle of St. Angelo. Also collection of 22 Dewey items.

Mr. Schwartz: Four ships, colonies and commerce tokens, 2 with U. S. flag.

Mr. Sghia: Collection of twenty Hentgen medals.

Mr. Schulman: A series of Canadian tokens; patterns of 1870, the Magdalen Island penny in proof, and the silver jeton of 1751, Louis XV (Breton 510).

Mr. Stein: Gaulish coins and medals and pictures of Mr. Hentgen.

Mr. Stack: 1935 freak half dollar, showing slip of collar.

Mr. Vander Meer: Six medals pertaining to Mr. Hentgen.

Mr. Wagner: Two French medals, and one Polish medal.

Mr. Dewey then spoke about the Index, which had been received. The Index to The Numismatist covers 50 years of the magazine, and required seven persons two years to complete. Of the seven persons collaborating, one was in Baltimore (Mr. Duffield), and one was in Chicago (Mr. Sheldon). The remaining five were all members of the Bronx Coin Club (Messrs. Reagan, Silverman, Schwartz, Dewey and Bullowa.)

Mr. Kortjohn was then called upon by the President to make some remarks regarding the A. N. A. Convention, which had been held during the last week in August in Detroit. The meeting was adjourned at 11 P. M., following the selection of the following topics for the November meeting.

Mr. Friedman: Pine Tree shilling.

Mr. Dewey: Lord Baltimore coinage.

The October meeting is that of the annual banquet, and the president appointed Mr. Sghia to oversee his usual functions. The night of the banquet is October 23rd, and the speaker is Shepard Pond, of Boston, Mass.

INDIANAPOLIS COIN CLUB—September 25. First meeting of the Indianapolis Coin Club was held in the Y. M. C. A. Auditorium in Indianapolis.

The following officers were elected to serve for a term of one year: L. H. Riggs, 5006 Brookville Rd., president; W. E. Pollard, 2323 Coyner, vice-president; R. B. Whitney, 2217 College Ave., Apt. 1, secretary; S. G. Kasberg, 4067 Central Ave., treasurer; R. R. Fiscus, 1833 Nowland Ave., curator and librarian.

Articles of association were adopted and twenty-three collectors were admitted to membership. There was also one guest in attendance. Meetings are to be held the fourth Wednesday in each month, with the exception of November and December, when the meetings will be held on the third Wednesday.

SPRINGFIELD COIN CLUB—290th meeting, October 9, Vice-President Wolcott presiding, with fourteen members and one guest present. The guest, John M. Blackhall, filed his application for membership.

It was decided to have the annual banquet meeting at 6.30 on Friday evening, November 15, at the Sheraton Hotel, and members were asked to bring something for door prizes.

The exhibit for the evening was given by Mr. Morris and consisted of a very interesting collection of coins issued by the countries at war. The English silver coins were most in evidence and included specimens of all denominations from 1551 up, even the rare double florin. Of the Russian coins shown, the platinum six-rouble piece was the most interesting. He also showed war medals of France, Belgium and England and told interesting things about them.

Mr. Morris's talk on collecting foreign coins was inspiring and interesting, giving all who heard it a better understanding of what the collecting of foreign coins means.

An auction was held.

OMAHA COIN CLUB—73rd meeting, October 4, called to order by President A. J. Pilmaier. Seven regular members were in attendance. Mr. R. G. Bullard, of Red Oak, was a visitor.

W. D. Neal was unanimously elected to membership.

We had several interesting exhibits of United States bronze and copper coins, including a complete set of uncirculated Indian and Lincoln Head cents. There were several exhibits of large cents and half cents. Included in the latter were some very nice large cents in a type collection.

An auction was held.

Another feature was our "Quizzer Bee," the members cooperating in bringing lists of some very tough questions. We find this a very educational part of our program.

PENN-OHIO COIN ASSOCIATION—October 5. Meeting held in Belden Hotel, Canton, Ohio, with 45 members at the banquet and 66 members registered at meeting.

Last year the Youngstown Numismatic Club decided that it would invite the other coin clubs in this district to its annual picnic, which was held at Geauga Lake Park. About 175 people attended that picnic, and at that picnic representatives of the various clubs decided to organize the Eastern Ohio and Western Pennsylvania Coin Clubs Association, which would include the clubs in Cleveland, Akron, Canton, Warren, Youngstown, New Castle, Pa., and Pittsburgh, Pa. Officers were elected, but no provision was made to set up a permanent organization. In the fall of 1939, the Youngstown Numismatic Club entertained this organization at its annual banquet, and a picnic was held this year at Geauga Lake Park.

At the picnic which was held on June 23, it was decided to hold a convention and display at Canton, Ohio, on October 5, and at this meeting it was decided to make this a permanent organization for the purpose of holding a meeting and display of coins in various cities in the spring and fall, and to have a picnic once each year, and the name of the organization was changed to the Penn-Ohio Coin Association.

A constitution was approved and Herbert Walker, Warren, Ohio, was delegated to draw up a set of by-laws to be submitted for approval at the next meeting, which is to be held in Pittsburgh, Pa., in the spring, Howard Gibbs, of the Pittsburg Coin Club, having invited the club to meet in that city at this time.

Present officers of the club are as follows: Sam Kabealo, Youngstown, Ohio, president; Joseph Zimmer, Youngstown, Ohio, vice-president; Herbert Walker, Warren, Ohio, second vice-president; A. F. Smith, Youngstown, secretary and treasurer.

Displays were as follows:

Howard Gibbs, Pittsburgh: Dekadrachm of Athens. Treponus, Roman-Campania, only two known, other one in Vatican collection. Foreign multiple crowns from 1½ to 10 crowns (silver dollars). Odd coins (silver) of Siam, pack saddle, bars and ingots. Silver bars and ingots, Burma. Dog-teeth money of South Sea Islands. Largest and smallest gold coins of world (largest, Japan, smallest, Nepal India, 3c). Jade coins of imperial palaces of China.

W. E. Welsh, Canton, Ohio: Dollars, 1795 to 1803. Half dollars, 1795 to 1817 and 1836, milled edge. Massachusetts cent and half cent, 1787 and 1788. Set of proof Trade dollars. 1893 and 1894 proof sets. Liberty head gold, $1 to $20. Indian head gold, $1, $2.50, $3, $5, $10 and $20 St. Gaudens. Complete set U. S. paper money of 1886, 1896, 1917 and 1923, various signatures and low numbers. Four Jackson cents.

Ray Lawrence, Youngstown, Ohio: Animals, fish, insects and reptiles of the world as displayed on coins, and complete set of U. S. cents, 1793 to date.

C. L. Nickels, Wellsville, Ohio: Silver dollars, 1795-1803, all types, various types gold dollars, and California gold. Complete set half cents, complete set uncirculated Indian heads, all types of half dimes and large cents, and complete set of uncirculated nickels.

V. L. Stover, Canton, Ohio: Coins of the 67 Emperors of Rome. Six Republican denarii. Five U. S. pattern half dollars. Widow's mites of Pontius Pilate, Herod the Great, Tiberius, Corinth stater, Athens ½ drachma, and various foreign coins.

Wm. G. Bruce, Canton, Ohio: Freak U. S. coins, off center, clipped, split, etc. Various Colonials. Types of half dimes, dimes, $5 gold, and various Civil War tokens.

An auction was held.

NEW JERSEY NUMISMATIC SOCIETY—October 10, 85th meeting. Fifteen members and two guests were present. President Brown was in the chair.

In the absence of Mr. Wade, the secretary read recently published items of numismatic interest.

President Brown distributed copies of the publication "Know Your Money" issued by the United States Secret Service.

A nominating committee was appointed, consisting of Messrs. May, Duffield, and Nettleship.

The Topic Committee announced the subject of the November meeting to be "Coins and Medals Relating to Elections."

Exhibits were as follows:

Mr. Beach: Collection of Hard Times tokens, 1820-1860. Silver scudo of Papal States, 1675.

Mr. Blaisdell: Complete set of proof nickels. Set of large cents, 1793-1857. Thirty-one die varieties of large cent, 1853.

Mr. Blake: National banknotes of various New Jersey banks.

Mr. Brookes: Five Hard Times tokens. Copper, Tobago counterstamped. Collection of Willkie buttons.

Mr. Brown: Maundy money of England, 1d, 2d, 3d, 4d, 1940. U. S. depression scrip, 50c., March, 1933, of Tarry Storage Co., Wichita Falls, Texas.

Mr. Capstick: India General Service medal, George VI head, with bar, issued to Fifteenth Punjab Regiment.

RACINE NUMISMATIC SOCIETY—31st meeting, October 11, Vice-President H. C. Voelker presiding. Eighteen members and three visitors present.

An invitation was read from the Milwaukee Numismatic Society inviting all our members to attend their sixth anniversary banquet to be held October 25.

A. J. Tanck gave an interesting account of the history of the J. I. Case Threshing Machine Co., token of Racine, Wis.

Richard Yeoman was selected chairman of our 1941 anniversary banquet.

Charles A. Wuerker was welcomed as a new member.

Exhibits at this meeting were as follows:

A. J. Tanck: An Edward T. Newell medal issued by the New York Numismatic Club.

Gene Arneson: 1936 to 1940 proof sets, 1 cent to 50 cents.

Louis Wilczynski: 1861 gold dollar, two faces, Unc. 1837 Russian three ruble 20 zlotych gold piece, Unc.

Karl Borseth: Brilliant proof Filipinas set, 1906, seven coins. 1761 Spanish dollar, extra fine.

MADISON COIN CLUB—Sept. 30. A splendid turnout of members answered President Gordon Gill's call to order. It was the first meeting of the 1940-41 season.

The first order of business was the election of officers for the coming year, and Gordon Gill was re-elected president. Other officers elected were: Vice-president, Lew Burger; treasurer, John Mader; librarian, Ray Rinden; secretary, Robert Bush.

The suggestion of joining the Madison Stamp Club each year for a big coin and stamp exhibit met with enthusiastic response. It was also proposed that we have display cases built for the purpose of showing our coins in banks and store windows in an effort to promote greater interest in our club.

It was decided that the members of our club visit the Milwaukee Coin Club the latter part of October.

President Gill brought to the meeting $10 in U. S. Lincoln and Indian head cents for the members to sort.

SEATTLE COIN CLUB—September 26, 53rd meeting, President Fouts presiding. Nine members were present. As this was the first meeting since June, Mr. Fouts asked the members to tell of their vacations and what coins had been acquired since the last meeting.

After each had responded, the matter of increasing the club membership was discussed. It was decided for a starter that each member should try and bring at least one visitor to the next meeting. It was also voted that in the future each member should take their turn at conducting a meeting and the one chosen could call on others for assistance. Mr. Worth will conduct the next meeting and the subject will be fractional currency.

Mr. Fouts told of his exhibit at the Puyallup Fair and of the hundreds of interested visitors that viewed his display.

The coins displayed at the meeting were mostly U. S. type pieces. Lunch was served after the meeting.

YOUNGSTOWN NUMISMATIC CLUB—October 3, President Lawrence in the chair. There were 28 members and guests present.

Ten of the members decided to attend the second annual banquet and display of Eastern Ohio and Western Pennsylvania Coin Clubs Association, sponsored by the Canton Coin Club at Canton, Ohio, October 5.

Mrs. T. B. Hyland, Columbiana; Ernest E. Sigle, Canfield, and Mrs. Eina J. Robinson, Youngstown, were elected to membership.

E. G. Rice, Hubbard, Ohio, a charter member of the club, was unanimously elected a life honorary member of the club.

Harley Freeman, of Cleveland, a member of the club, had a very extensive display of paper money, of $1, $2, $5 and $10 denominations, practically all types and signatures, and he gave a very interesting talk regarding them.

Displays by members consisted of a set of coins of Iceland, Fugio cents, complete set of cents, and two-cent pieces, Jewish shekel, ancient Greek coins, Swiss commemoratives, Lincoln medal and broken-bank bills.

The next meeting will be November 9, at which time there will be a display of coins by members, which will be open to the public, followed by an auction sale and then by the annual banquet.

An auction sale was held.

AKRON COIN CLUB—25th meeting, September 16. A dinner was held at the Elks' Club at 7 P. M. on the occasion of the second anniversary of the Akron Coin Club. There were 54 members and visitors present. Our toastmaster, S. J. Kabealo, of Youngstown, introduced Howard D. Gibbs, of Pittsburgh, Pa., speaker of the evening. His subject was "Coins Through the Ages."

Mr. Gibbs' talk was illustrated by odd and curious coins and media of the world. As a special treat Mr. Gibbs displayed for the first time a rare coil rope of feathers made from the top-knots of honey birds and used in Africa at one time as money. He also displayed the very rare dekadrachm of Athens, coined about 400 B. C.

Other exhibitors were:

S. J. Kabealo: Proof Trade dollars.

Howard Certain: Roman Republic denarii.

V. L. Oblisk: United States type coins.

F. W. Hammett: Akron Coin Club medal.

Visitors included members from the Cleveland Coin Club, Stark Coin Club (Canton, Ohio), Youngstown Numismatic Club and the Pittsburgh Coin Club.

Announcement was made that the Northeastern Ohio and Western Pennsylvania Coin Clubs Association would hold its second annual meeting in Canton, Ohio, on October 5, at the Belden Hotel.

DES MOINES COIN CLUB—55th meeting, October 4, Dr. N. M. Hansen presiding. Eight members and three visitors were present.

Mr. Radke reported on preparations being made for the I. N. A. meeting at Ames, Iowa, October 19 and 20, and urged the members of our club to attend.

Two of our visitors, Paul Kagin and George A. Shuck, joined our club.

Mr. Radke and Mr. Swanson displayed early Roman and Greek coins.

The usual auction followed adjournment.

CHICAGO COIN CLUB—October 2, 260th meeting, R. L. McBrien presiding. Eighty members and nine visitors present.

The applications of Lila E. Wirth and John T. Paslawsky were referred to the membership committee.

Lee Hewitt, on behalf of the banquet committee, reported that the date of the banquet will be November 23, at the Atlantic Hotel, and that the principal speaker will be B. Max Mehl, of Fort Worth, Texas. An invitation is extended all presidents of nearby clubs to attend this banquet as our guests.

The exhibit and auction committee request that members desiring to exhibit and sell at the banquet prepare their material for next meeting. The exhibit room will be open to the public the night of the banquet.

Exhibits were as follows:

Ernest Jonas: White and brown porcelain medal with portrait of Frederick the Great of Germany. Höhr-Rhineland, 1921, 25, 50, 75 pfennig in red, gray, black, and blue; 75 pfennig in white porcelain.

Wyon.

M. A. Powells: Bullet money of Siam, 1/32 to 4 ticals; saddle-pack piece of northern Thailand; four rare pieces of gambling tokens used by the royal family; four pieces glass tokens of Thailand; boat money of Laos; Tongue money used in Laos and Cambodia; Current set of French Morocco, from 25 mazunas to 5 francs; China, ½ fen to 20 fen, struck in the 25th year of the republic. Large medal of Thomas Edison. Two medals of the Olympic meet of 1932, held in Los Angeles. East Topei autonomous government, from ¼c. to 20c.

WESTERN RESERVE NUMISMATIC CLUB—234th meeting, September 11. There were 34 members and 6 guests present, with Judge Sawicki presiding.

Mr. Gregor reported on the proceedings of the A. N. A. convention in Detroit.

Remarks were made by Messrs. Sawicki, Roth, Freeman, and Walker. Mr. Bruce, of Canton, and Mr. Kabealo, of Youngstown, talked on behalf of the coming annual meeting of the Northeastern Ohio and Western Pennsylvania Coin Clubs Association to be held in Canton, October 5. Mr. Kabealo hinted that our own club should sponsor the 1941 meet.

Exhibits were as follows:

Howard D. Gibbs: Dollars of the Holy Roman Empire, 1479, 1484, 1486; of England (Oxford), 1642-44; of Denmark, quadruple piefort crown dated 1641; dollars of Sweden, Cologne, Jevvers, West Indies, and ring dollars of various West Indian Islands.

Frank W. Hammett: First anniversary medals of the Akron Coin Club.

Harley L. Freeman: National Bank notes bearing charter numbers 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7; complete set of silver and nickel coins of Venezuela.

Ambrose P. Spencer: First bronze of Hadrian, minted in Bithynia; denarius of the Aemilia family, B. C. 54; a tetrobol of Sicily.

Joseph F. Sawicki: 358 dollars of the world.

BURLINGTON COIN CLUB—Fourteen persons attended the October 7 meeting at the home of its president, Dr. A. V. Eisenhart. Featuring the meeting was a discussion of plans to send a large delegation to the Iowa Numismatic Association convention at Ames, October 19-20. It was voted to sponsor an open meeting for the Secret Service "Know Your Money" program in November. The Credit Bureau and Retail Merchants Bureau will cooperate in inviting 100 to 200 persons to this program, following a dinner at Hotel Burlington. The coin club will present a coin display at the dinner.

Stanley Smith described his recent trip east, during which he was a guest of the Washington (D. C.) club, where he was impressed by the excellent program. Members talked on "Summer Acquisitions."

Miss Gladys Nelson was elected vice-president, succeeding Miss Cleo Loserth, who resigned, as she was moving out of the city.

Dr. and Mrs. Eisenhart served refreshments. This was the first meeting attempted at the home of members, away from the Chamber of Commerce. Next meeting will be October 21 at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. T. R. Hammer. Mr. Hammer is Librarian-Curator of the American Numismatic Association. All members will display type sets.

NORTHWEST COIN CLUB—Oct. 3. Twenty four members were present.

Geo. Edwards invited the club to meet at his home in St. Paul for the October 17 meeting. Mr. Ernest Nelson of Minneapolis invited the club to meet at his home in Deephaven, Lake Minnetonka, for the November 7 meeting. Both invitations were accepted by the club members.

The secretary announced that, owing to pressure of personal affairs, he would not be a candidate for any office, though he would be as active as possible. The club honored him with a rising vote of thanks for his past services.

President Montgomery appointed a nominating committee to submit names to be acted on at our St. Paul meeting to be held November 28.

The Rev. Elias Rasmussen then gave a lively account of the Detroit Convention of the A. N. A. and of famous collectors he had met in his years of coin collecting. He then showed his collection of medieval seals and talked about old customs.

The Northwest Coin Club has a 20-foot booth at the Northwest States Book-Art-Gift Show held at the Minneapolis Auditorium October 7-12. This six-day event is sponsored by some of the most prominent people of Minneapolis. Exhibitors are: Carl Becken, aeronautical coins and medals. James Benane, medieval French and Renaissance silver and gold. Hjalmer Carlson, Civil War tokens and European silver coins. Arthur McCracken, British coins from Roman times to the present. J. J. Montgomery, British Colonial, and U. S. silver, copper and paper. Paul E. Olson, Ancient Greek and Roman gold and silver, miscellaneous coins of odd design or unusual history.

WASHINGTON NUMISMATIC SOCIETY—Recent meetings of the Washington Numismatic Society have featured talks and displays by its own members. Mr. Weikert spoke to the club in September on the benefits of having a hobby. He prefaced his discussion by reading an article on collecting by his friend George Matthew Adams, in which Mr. Adams pointed out that collecting friends is the finest hobby of all. Mr. Weikert differentiated between sports, the arts, science, and a true hobby, which he stated consists of collecting specimens and studying them. It not only adds years to one's life, he said, but preserves history for mankind; in coins, you have the history of the world before you, he said.

At the October meeting, Mr. Leachman carried on this theme by displaying British Dominion and Colonial coins. He paralleled his exhibit with a comprehensive discussion of the history of the various parts of the empire which had issued the coins, the wars, conquests and purchases which had taken place in the past 250 years. Mr. Leachman has a very fine and interesting scrapbook to accompany his collection.

David Bullowa, of New York, assistant editor of The Numismatist and author of numismatic books, was a guest at the October meeting. He had brought with him some beautiful bank notes and discussed their merits. The club found special interest in the watermarks on the notes, a mark not found on our own currency. Mr. Bullowa bestowed upon his friends a Russian bank note of 1912.

STARK COIN CLUB—October 5th, 63rd meeting. This meeting was in the form of a dinner, the Stark Coin Club being host to the Northeastern Ohio and Western Pennsylvania Coin Clubs Association, renamed the Penn-Ohio Coin Clubs Association at this meeting.

The meeting was held at the Belden Hotel, starting at 2.30 with a lively coin auction, followed by a business meeting. At 6.30 all enjoyed a fine dinner.

Ray Lawrence, of Youngstown, was toastmaster. Howard Gibbs, of Pittsburgh, was guest speaker, his subject "Know Your Coins," followed by brief talks by Don Martin, radio announcer for Station WHK of Cleveland, "Scouting for Interesting Moments on Hobbies," and Herbert Walker, of Warren, Ohio, "What Is Behind a Coin." There were 45 present at the dinner and an additional 23 persons were visitors at the meeting. A vote of thanks was given to those who so kindly donated coins for the auction, also to Mr. Kabealo, who acted as auctioneer.

The following exhibits were shown:

Howard Gibbs, of Pittsburgh: Odd and curious media of exchange along with rare ancient coins, including an Athenian dekadrachm.

Clyde Richardson, of Comumbiana, Ohio: Set of proof eagle and Indian head cents.

Ray Lawrence, of Youngstown: Coins bearing the likeness of animals, birds and reptiles, also porcelain coins of Siam and other oddities of the world.

Sam Kabealo, of Youngstown: Set of U. S. quarters, 1796 to date, in uncirculated condition.

Eugene Sellers, of Hartville, Ohio: Gold coins of 17 nations, U. S. gold and various U. S. coins.

C. L. Nickels, of Wellsville, Ohio: Uncirculated St. Gaudens $20 gold piece; miscellaneous U. S. gold and silver coins in uncirculated and proof condition.

William Bruce, of Canton, Ohio: 125 varieties of Civil War cents and Canton (Ohio) currency.

Walter Welch, of Canton, Ohio: Dollars, 1795 to 1803, inclusive; Trade and regular silver dollars in proof condition.

V. L. Stover, of Canton, Ohio: Coins of the 67 Emperors of Rome, from Augustus to Theodosius. Type set of U. S. commemorative half dollars; 8 rare pattern half dollars; mites of Pontius Pilate, Herod the Great and Valerius Gratius, and half shekel of Judaea.

CALIFORNIA COIN CLUB—151st meeting, October 1, thirty members and guests being present. President Larson presided.

The applications for membership of S. P. Lilley and Charles A. Carlton were favorably acted upon, and Mr. Lilley, formerly a resident of the Punjab, in India, promised to address the club at its November meeting, which will be held on November 12.

Edward M. Lee, the well-known authority on California gold coins and a charter member, was present for the first time after several months of illness. Dr. A. F. Pradeau presented Mr. Lee with an engraved plaque.

Holger Jorgensen then addressed the club on coins of the Roman Empire, supplementing his talk with an unusually fine exhibit of bronze, silver and gold pieces beginning with coins of Pompey and Julius Caesar. Due to the fact that there are comparatively few Roman collectors and because millions of Roman coins have been found in the past twenty years, prices are generally low and the coins easily obtainable. Following his talk on Roman coins, Mr. Jorgensen, at the President's request, gave a synopsis of an address on coins of the Bible, mentioning in particular the gold drachm referred to in Ezra, the Persian gold daric, the Jewish shekel, the Tribute Penny of Tiberius, the widow's mite, and the thirty pieces of silver paid to Judas for betraying Christ.

The meeting closed with the usual auction.

BROOKLYN COIN CLUB—89th meeting, October 1, with Mr. Kosoff, President, in the chair. Fifteen members were present.

The President appointed Messrs. Reagan, Kraus and Klaf as a nominating committee to prepare a slate for the election of the 1941 officers.

An offer to publish in pamphlet form twelve papers read at our club during 1941 was accepted. Sufficient papers on a variety of subjects have been volunteered to uphold our part of the agreement.

Boris Wishy read his fine paper "The Ancestor of the American Dollar."

William S. Darrow was unanimously elected to membership.

The topics as announced for the November meeting are as follows: Coins of Panama; Political and Campaign Tokens; California Gold Quarters, and Half Dollars.

The following exhibits were shown:

Mr. Heft: Several types of silver dollars; silver assay bar from San Francisco, 1719.

Mr. Schmidt: Tokens struck by Monneron Bros., Paris; coins of Cambodia, Cayenne, Cochinchina, Reunion Island and Tago.

Mr. Schwartz: Two Columbian World's Fair tokens, each with the Lord's Prayer on the reverse, one with bearded bust to right and the other with a long-haired, clean-shaven bust to left.

Mr. Kraus: Russian roubles of Anna, 1734; Katherine, 1745, and Katherine II, 1765; thaler of Transylvania.

Mr. Kosoff: Half cent, 1793; Venice gold ducat; gold coin of India.

Mr. B. Wishy: 1878 Trade dollar; 1798 silver dollar; 1770 Charles III Mexican 8 reales; 1852 2½ guilders of William III of Holland.

Mr. Reagan: 1776 Continental dollar; eight Lincoln medals; six Civil War tokens in white metal.

Mr. Morgenthau: 54 assorted Columbian Exposition tickets, including admission to the grounds, transportation within and without, admissions to various exhibits and concessions; 14 assorted medals, including one of wood; two watch-case openers; one rolled nickel of 1884, and the extremely rare beer check of the Hagenbeck Arena Restaurant.

Mr. Knoth: 1892 Columbian half dollar; thaler of Transylvania dated 1590, with bust of Sigismund Bathori; 1799 silver dollar.

BALTIMORE COIN CLUB—October 3. There were fourteen members present. Commander Laurence M. Cockaday, of Annapolis, was unanimously elected to membership.

Murray Heiserman made a few informative remarks about the Federal laws concerning the mutilation and destruction of U. S. coins, which created a little discussion.

There was a discussion about the advisability of holding a gala meeting, including an exhibition of coins and a buffet supper at our meeting for November 7, a program night, to which our friends from neighboring cities would be invited. The matter was finally handed over to a committee consisting of Messrs. Hall, Stewart, Bates and Dr. Plummer.

This was our program night and exhibits of fractional currency were offered by Messrs. Straus and Austin, which were exceptionally fine specimens. Mr. Austin had prepared a paper on the subject, but due to the late hour he postponed the reading of the paper for a later program night.

BOSTON NUMISMATIC SOCIETY—September 30, 1940, in room V, at the Boston City Club. In the absence, due to illness of the president and vice-president, Mr. Gifford acted as temporary chairman. Eight members were present.

One application for membership was received. It was referred to the executive committee for action.

The speaker for the evening was Mr. Hans Subak, who gave an informal talk on Roman coins from 27 B. C. to 400 A. D. He traced their development and discussed their comparative silver and copper content as well as citing the rarities. He exhibited five large trays of silver and copper coins representing the period covered. He was given a vote of thanks at the conclusion of his talk.

There followed a short, general numismatic discussion and examination of the various exhibits.

The meeting then adjourned.

Exhibits: Mr. Subak: Five trays of Roman silver and copper coins in connection with his talk.

Mr. Welti: Double string of wampum.

Mr. Lowenstam: Austria, 2 gulden commemorating the marriage of Franz Joseph; Pine Tree shilling; Austrian gold ducat, 1787; several Greek tetradrachms; several silver coins of Cambodia and Baroda.

Mr. Evanson: Copy of Connecticut threepence in silver, 1737; Boston Numismatic Society 60th anniversary medal; $10 note, "Roller Skates of America"; proof cast copy of a very rare Washington medal; circular letter from the mint, 1866.

HEART OF AMERICA NUMISMATIC ASSOCIATION—September 9. The meeting was opened by the president, Dr. Richard G. Helman. There were 31 members and visitors present.

Dr. Judd, of the Omaha Coin Club, had some very interesting coins on display. A. P. Ford gave a talk on the effect of the coins contributed to build up the club's treasury.

Mr. Rowold gave a pep talk to the club and encouraged them to contribute coins for auction to raise money for the club treasury.

A tentative date of the meeting for the St. Louis club will be November 16 or 17 if suitable with the St. Louis Club to visit the Heart of America Numismatic Club.

The visitors were Mr. and Mrs. Young, Mr. Marion, Mr. Stroud and Mr. Kegin. Mr. Kegin is a former member.

Mr. Carlson will favor us with the pictures in natural colors that he and Mrs. Carlson made while touring in Mexico.

Mr. Schmandt had on display a group of type coins and gave an interesting talk on the different types of coins. His display contained some of the silver dollars of the 1795 variety. Mr. Morgenroth had on display an English five-pound gold coin. This is scarce and is uncommon in this country.

Motion made and carried giving the librarian authority to have the Fifty Year Index bound, also to purchase the two missing volumes of The Numismatist.

Mr. Janda's display consisted of three complete sets of the Liberty standing quarters, 1916-1930; complete sets of matched Indian head cents, uncirculated; 1796 over '95 gold $5; proof set of Liberty nickels, 1883-1912, inclusive.

Mr. Kegin: Diamond-shape crown of Denmark with Hebrew inscription, 1670-1699; also some early Papal coins in unusual condition.

PITTSBURGH COIN CLUB—September 19, with Mr. Buterbaugh in the chair. There were fifteen members present.

K. L. McIntosh was elected to membership.

The Secretary was asked to express to our president, Dr. Hepting, the club's condolences on the death of his wife.

Mr. Kabealo reported on the second annual dinner of the Northeastern Ohio and Western Pennsylvania Coin Club Association to be held October 5 at Hotel Belden, Canton, Ohio.

Mr. Gibbs reported on the A. N. A. convention in Detroit. The following exhibits were on display:
 Mr. Harbison: Commemoratives, Isabella quarter, 1938 Oregon and Boone sets.
 Mr. Kontrick: Tribute penny of Tiberius, Rome, 14 A. D.; Charleroi wooden nickel.
 Mr. Layton: Austria gold 4 florin, 1883; U. S. gold $10, 1891-CC.
 Mr. Millikan: Oklahoma sales tax token; pattern two cents, 1863.
 Mr. Rehula: Commemorative gold; Charleroi wooden nickels.
 Mr. Sallach: Coins of Luxembourg.

MILWAUKEE NUMISMATIC SOCIETY—September 27, with 24 members and three guests in attendance. Secretary Hoffman presided. Mr. Meder acted as Secretary pro tem.

Means and ways for raising money for the purpose of staging the 1941 Central States Numismatic Society convention next year were again discussed. It was decided that a banquet and frolic should be held at Van De Boom's Museum Restaurant at Saukeville, Wis., at 8 o'clock P. M. on October 25, 1940, this meeting to constitute our sixth anniversary meeting and celebration.

A motion was adopted that the floral committee resolution adopted last month be incorporated into the society's constitution and by-laws.

Exhibits:

John Stewart: A number of uncirculated U. S. silver dollars and a number of dollars in proof.

Frank Schilz: Several small gold coins and tokens.

N. J. Hoffman: Four pattern Washington two-cent pieces in copper, copper-nickel, bronze, and nickel, all proofs.

WESTERN PENNSYLVANIA NUMISMATIC SOCIETY—October 1. President Woodside was in the chair. Twelve members were present.

The society decided to have a dinner later in the season. President Woodside appointed a committee to set the date and place and to arrange all details.

Robert S. Porter, Jr., whose home is in Tarentum, Pa., presented an interesting paper on the coins of ancient Tarentum and exhibited a tray of fine specimens.

Exhibits for the evening:

Mr. Manning: Uncirculated U. S. half dollars, 1872-S, 1892-S, 1902-S and 1903-S; U. S. quarters, 1918-D, 1928-D and S, and 1929-S.

Mr. Eastwood: Eighteenth century English tokens.

Mr. Gaede: Various U. S. small cents and mint-marked quarters.

Mr. Porter: Complete set of Morgan type quarters, very fine; complete set of Liberty Standing and Washington quarters, uncirculated.

Mr. Woodside: Ancient coins of Egypt, Macedon, Athens, Aegina, Mauretania and Sicyon.

Mr. Marlier: Tray of ancient coins of Egypt, Greece and Rome, in gold and silver.

Mr. Hall: Series of Lincoln medals issued to commemorate publication of King's catalogue of Lincoln items in The Numismatist; several oddities in Lincoln medals.

Mr. Locker: Half dime.

Mr. Coatsworth: Various early quarters; Goloid pattern dollar, 1879.

LEHIGH VALLEY COIN CLUB—September 26. R. S. Taylor, Jr., presided, with 20 members and one guest present.

One new member was elected to club membership.

Claude Eckert, 211 N. Sixth St., Allentown, Pa., was elected a member.

The door prize was won by the president, R. S. Taylor, Jr.

It was decided to invite the newly formed Reading (Pa.) club to one of our future meetings.

Mr. Shepherd, of Palmerton, Pa., gave a very fine talk on gold of earliest times up to present date, with a beautiful specimen display of twenty-two pieces of the present types by P. J. Dougherty, Palmerton, Pa.

Ira Reed informed the club that the 1941 A. N. A. Convention would be held in Philadelphia and also gave a brief talk of his experiences at the convention in Detroit.

The banquet committee gave a report on the coming annual banquet to be held some time this month. No definite date has been set.

After the business meeting a large auction was held.

QUAD CITY COIN CLUB—September 12. There were 19 members and two guests present.

It was decided to suspend the auction.

A letter was read in regard to sound films entitled "Know Your Coins" and "Making Money."

A letter was also read from Mr. Kramer, of the Davenport Chamber of Commerce, in regard to the Spring I. N. A. convention. The president appointed L. S. Wright as general chairman to draft an organization to handle the I. N. A. convention, provided it comes to Davenport.

An invitation was read from the Quad City Stamp Club asking us to join in the display to be held at the Moline Public Library October 18 and 19. Mr. Wright will arrange the displays and requested the members to bring their material to the next meeting.

Mr. Baker gave a report on the I. N. A. medal. Mr. Ripstra is cutting the dies and they will be ready for the Ames meeting.

The principal speaker at the October meeting will be Loyd Gettys on "Early Cents."

The president turned the meeting over to Mr. Wright who spoke on "Presidential Medals" and illustrated his talk with his complete collection of medals.

The club is indebted to Mr. Wright for such a constructive and interesting talk.

The displays were as follows:

Mr. Moore: A complete set of gold bullet money, Siam, 1851-1868. A very rare set of silver bullet money, Siam. A rare Lincoln memorial locket by Bovey, 1865. An Austrian gold ducat, 1910.

Mr. Benson: The latest Vatican set, 1939. Four values of Travancore. New Albania set issued by Italy, 1939 and 1940. New set from Ireland, 1939.

Mr. Laurent: The first steel medal, issued in 1901, for the benefit of the Public Library of Waukesha, Wis. A set of Hard Times tokens.

Mr. Wright: A complete set of Presidential medals.

PACIFIC COAST NUMISMATIC SOCIETY—297th meeting, August 28, called to order by Vice-President Osborne. Thirteen members were present.

Mr. Parker reported for the auction committee and stated a monster coin auction would be held at the next meeting.

Mr. Knabenschuh reported for the program committee that the "Know Your Money" cards were the gift of Messrs. Webb and Knabenschuh.

Mr. Knabenschuh reported for the twenty-fifth anniversary committee for the Banquet. The program of the dinner, was made possible by donations from Messrs. Werling, Sherow, H. L. Hill, Hicks, Knabenschuh, Webb, Parker, Mitchell, Schneider, Conner and Harris. Mr. Knabenschuh and the donors were thanked for their fine work and donations. Ways and means of getting the matter of the twenty-fifth Anniversary medal cleared up were discussed, but no definite action was taken.

Mr. Poizner led the discussion re increasing the membership and better attendance. Various plans were suggested, such as special invitations to out-of-town groups, membership for banks, phoning individual members. It was pointed out that dealers could greatly assist in obtaining new members, as they have done in the past.

Mr. Poizner was added to the membership committee by the chair.

Mr. Wm. G. Wilson spoke on gold cases.

MISSOURI NUMISMATIC SOCIETY—September 16. Meeting opened by President Bushnell with 26 members and visitors present.

The president addressed the club on the subject of increasing our membership from fifty to a hundred members. Two teams, captained by Mr. Lounsberry and Mr. Kelley, were chosen for a membership drive, the losers to treat the winners.

Committees appointed for this season are as follows: Program, Mr. Newman, Mr. Saab; membership, Mr. Lounsberry, Mr. Kelley; publicity, Mr. Stevenson, Mr. Oberer; exhibits, Mr. MacCauley, Mr. Saab; finance, Mr. Mueller.

Two new members, W. H. Ouzts and A. Paul Davis, were welcomed into the club.

Mr. Kelley gave a very interesting talk on his recent trip to Detroit, where he attended the A. N. A. convention.

Mr. Olson made the suggestion that a trading post be opened, thus giving members an opportunity to trade or dispose of duplicate coins. This suggestion was enthusiastically approved by all members.

Exhibits were as follows:

G. E. May: Half cents and large cents.

F. K. Saab: 1879 Goloid Metric dollar. Gold 5-mark pieces of Wurtemberg.

A. B. Kelley: Proof and uncirculated cents, 1856-1940.

An auction was held.

WESTCHESTER COUNTY COIN CLUB—77th regular monthly meeting, September 17, President Jacob presiding. Twelve members and three guests were present.

The president appointed Messrs. Sghia, Dewey, Stein and Kortjohn to act as a committee for contacting one speaker a month for 1941. Also, the question of how many club members are members of the A. N. A. was laid over until the new directory is published.

Mr. Cox was appointed to act as a committee of one for furthering the issuance of the medal which was to be presented to each club member by the city of New Rochelle.

President Jacob and Mr. Marsden, librarian of the club, are to write a letter to the New Rochelle Public Library to make possible the loaning of the club's Numismatist to members of the club upon presentation of their current membership card.

Mr. Kortjohn gave a very interesting report on the activities of the A. N. A. Convention in Detroit.

Mr. Sheldon was introduced. He exhibited a medal presented to the late Harry T. Wilson for his 43 years of faithful service to the firm for whom he worked. He gave an interesting talk on parts of the life of Mr. Wilson and a very pathetic story of his death.

Topics of the evening: Rosa Americana coins, three-cent nickel, coins of post-war Germany and metallic emergency money. Ancient: The first ten Emperors, and items of your own interest.

Exhibits were as follows:

Mr. Jacob: Coins of post-war Germany and emergency money, including aluminum, iron and porcelain, also encased German postage stamps.

Mr. Marsden: 29 different varieties of Willkie political buttons.

Mr. Kortjohn: Various convention photographs, Detroit Convention badge and token, also a complete set of three cent pieces.

Mr. Freidman: Three first-day covers of St. Gaudens; 1907 rolled-edge eagle without motto and with periods; 1907 wire-edge eagle with Roman numerals, and 6 Civil War tokens.

Mr. Baker: Complete type set of commemorative silver coins of post-war Germany.

Mr. Cox: Emergency money of Germany, Danzig, Coblenz and Neuweid.

Mr. Massey: Seven three-cent pieces in proof.

SIoux CITY COIN CLUB—Dr. Thomas M. Clark, Sioux City numismatist, displayed several pieces of rare and old money before the Sioux City Coin Club at its regular September meeting. Among his coins is a piece referred to in the Bible as the "widow's mite." Dr. Clark also exhibited several shinplasters and other old notes.

Ed Kowalke, who has collected and mounted a group of representative United States coins, also showed his collection.

A great deal of interest has been shown in this hobby in this territory. The coin club now has eighteen members.

FALL DINNER MEETING OF QUAD CITY COIN CLUB.

The annual fall dinner meeting of the Quad City Coin Club was held in the Empire Room of the Blackhawk Hotel on September 29 at 1 o'clock. Fifty members and their guests, including representatives of numismatic groups within a radius of 150 miles, attended.

Mr. Baker gave a short talk urging closer cooperation among the coin clubs in this vicinity.

Ernest Moore told of his visit to the American Numismatic Association convention in Detroit this past summer, where he also saw Henry Ford's collection.

L. V. Belt, Waterloo, president of the Iowa Numismatic Association, spoke on the fall convention to be held in Ames, October 19 and 20.

Ted Hammer, Burlington, spoke on the American Numismatic Association's library, containing some 600 volumes, of which he is custodian.

Plans for the joint Quad City Stamp and Coin Show to be held in the Moline Public Library on October 18 and 19 were outlined by Mr. L. S. Wright.

A sound motion picture showing the history of the motion picture from the time of the Egyptian Empire to the present time was shown.

The Bolivian Government has derived the sum of approximately 7,000,000 bolivianos from the seigniorage on its coinage of nickel coins. The Government is using this profit for the installation of mining equipment.

THE "ROYAL" COIN CABINET

ALL STEEL CONSTRUCTION

It is always our policy to offer the collecting public the largest variety of accessories, at the lowest possible price. We have now released the "ROYAL" COIN CABINET, which should appeal to all collectors, who are in the market for a reasonably priced ALL STEEL coin cabinet. This cabinet has many improvements over similar cabinets appearing on the market. All sections are securely welded so that there are no parts to become misplaced, or lost. Each cabinet has sixteen compartments which will hold up to 900 half dollars or 2200 small cents filed conveniently in 2x2 coin envelopes. There are feet on the bottom of each cabinet which fit into embossed recesses on top to prevent slipping when several cabinets are stacked. There are holes punched in the feet, and recessed top, so that several cabinets may be all bolted together in one unit.

SPECIFICATIONS:

SIZE:—Length 11½ in.; Width 9½ in.; Depth 5 in.

THE CONVENTION CITY OF AMERICA

Extraordinary as it may seem, we have always found, during our experience covering many decades, that

COINS TEND TO INCREASE IN VALUE UNDER WAR CONDITIONS

This phenomenon is no doubt accounted for by the desire most people have to put at any rate a certain proportion of their money into something safe, tangible and portable. We can therefore strongly recommend Coin Collecting as a Fascinating Hobby and as a Sound Investment and American Collectors are in a specially favorable position on account of the Rise in the Value of the Dollar.

Here are a few excerpts from our Monthly Coin List for May:

JAMES KELLY

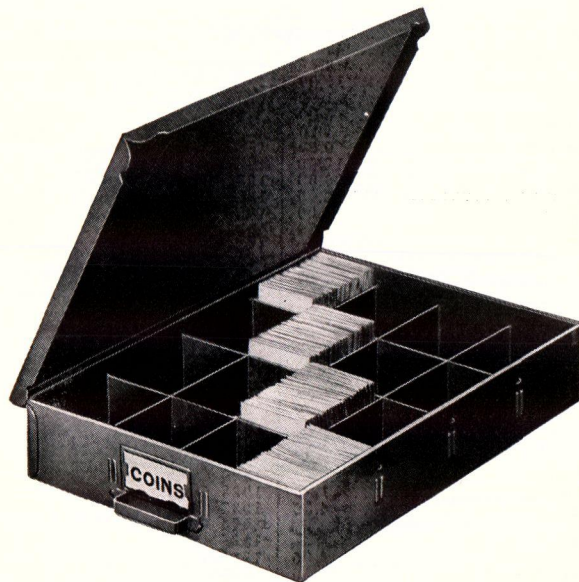

Third and Broadway, Dayton, Ohio.

$1.48—The Marvel (All Steel) Coin Box—$1.48

Holds 750 to 1,000 envelopes containing coins in UPRIGHT position. In rolls or loose will hold 1,500 to 2,000 coins, depending on size of coins.

Made of HEAVY fire resisting ROLLED STEEL

Priced VERY low for big volume business.
$1.48—POSTPAID

Write for WHOLESALE Prices.

This box is made to last a LIFETIME

OUR MARVEL is something thousands of collectors have wanted for years. Most coin containers, as you know, are not satisfactory for the reason that coins are not held in UPRIGHT and COMPACT position. Our MARVEL box will hold more coins than many of the high-priced containers. Our MARVEL COIN BOX is 11½ inches Long, 9 inches Wide and about 2½ inches Deep. It has SIXTEEN COMPARTMENTS. Each compartment made just the correct size to hold coins UPRIGHT and COMPACT. SEE ILLUSTRATION ABOVE. The partitions may be changed or completely removed if desired. The MARVEL has HINGED COVER, CARD HOLDER and BAR-TYPE HANDLE, all finished in MOSS GREEN ENAMEL. Top of box is made flat so two or more may be stacked one above the other. Why keep your collection in some old makeshift container when you can own a GUARANTEED all-steel (fire resisting) box that will last a lifetime, for the small sum of $1.48 POSTPAID. Our MARVEL is something new, and is GUARANTEED by our 34 years in the coin business.

Our MARVEL may be used for a multitude of purposes. VERY handy for holding STAMPS, RUBBER BANDS, NAILS, BOLTS and HUNDREDS of other articles. Get one for the GARAGE, WORKSHOP or KITCHEN.

SPECIAL OFFER—We will send TWO of our MARVEL coin containers as advertised above, for only $2.55 POSTPAID.
Send us your order AT ONCE. You will want more.

GEORGE A. GILLETTE COLLECTION at AUCTION

Owing to failing health, and unable to continue collecting, my good friend and numismatic traveling companion has requested me to make a catalogue of his collection and offer same at Auction. A student of numismatics, his collection covers all periods, and is especially rich in Greek and Roman, Crowns and multiples of the seventeenth and eighteenth century, Artistic and Historical Medals. The collection will be offered in two parts—Part 1 will be sold December 7th, Part 2 in February.
